Truman Defeated on Labor Bill by House

13 Indicted As Gamblers By Prince Georges Jury

'Snags' Lewis Among Group, All of Whom Are Under Similar District Charges

The Prince Georges County grand jury yesterday returned gambling indictments against 13 men, headed by Gambler William (Snags) Lewis.

All had previously been indicted by the special District gambling grand jury convened by United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

All except one were arrested in a raid March 25 on Lewis' headquarters at 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md. This raid led to the District indictments.

The indictments yesterday are the culmination of an investigation started by States Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie.

Recesses After Indictment

After returning the indictments the grand jury recessed for an indeterminate period. It was the second recess within the past two weeks. The jury reconvened yesterday. Not within the memory of oldtime employes has a county grand jury taken two recesses.

Two special investigators who conducted the raids for Fay in March appeared before the county grand jury. They were James Sharp and Downey Rice.

Fay's raids were made without knowledge of Bowie, who said later they had upset a number of cases in which he had obtained evidence. Upon Bowie's return from a vacation trip, he conferred with Fay and the two investigators were sent to appear before the grand jury.

Indictments returned yesterday named William (Snags) Lewis, 4335 Blagden ave., nw.; George P. Scott, 1031 E st. se.; Fred Sutton, 1210 6th st. nw.; Lonnie Black, 637 L st. se.; Anis White (Wycke), 122 F st. nw.; Ralph Spotswood, 318 N. Henry st., Alexandria, Va.; Edward L. Hinkle, jr., 811 Presidential Gardens, Alexandria, Va.; Gregory Seger, 2801 22d st. se.; Sterling D. Welch, 4611 Verplanck pl. nw.; Dean Kennedy, 2100 Queen's Chapel rd., Avondale, Md.; Bernard J. Del-Negro, 2428 Tunlaw rd. nw.; Ellis Solet, 2805 Lee blvd., Arlington, Va.; Philip Samakow, 1360 Peabody st. nw. Samakow was the only man not arrested in the March 25 raid in Bladensburg, Md.

All Charged With Bookmaking

The indictments charged all 13 with bookmaking and participation in the operation of a lottery. All those charged are free under $1500 bond on the District indictments.

The grand jury presented its preliminary report to Judge Charles C. Marbury of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro yesterday and said its "routine work" was completed, but that it was unable to make a final report at this time.

It gave as reasons for the recess that "certain desired witnesses and certain allegedly valuable documentary and other evidence purportedly in existence are not now available."

The jurors said they wished to recess "until further developments or changed conditions warrant resumption" of active sessions.

Berlin Note Believed Sent To Russians

Allied Declaration Puts Next Move Up To Soviet, Diplomat Says in New York

New York, May 3 (AP).—Envoys of the United States, Britain and France sat in their offices all day today, apparently waiting for Russia to make the next move toward lifting the Berlin blockade.

It was understood that the most recent step in the top secret talks here was the delivery of a joint Western Power declaration to Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jakob A. Malik. The statement presumably was drafted after Monday's conference, attended by Dr. Philip C. Jessup, United States Ambassador-at-Large; Sir Alexander Cadogan of Britain and Jean Chauvel of France.

Next Step Up to Malik

The next step, diplomatic informants indicated, is for Malik to notify the Western envoys whether he is prepared to confer with them again on the basis of their joint declarations.

Malik attended a committee meeting at Lake Success this morning and then returned to the Soviet delegation home on Park ave. A secretary said this afternoon he was not in the Soviet building but refused to say where he had gone.

Malik answered "no comment" to all questions about a possible meeting when he left Lake Success.

Jessup, Cadogan and Chauvel met at Jessup's Park ave. office yesterday.

Out of this three-power talk was drawn up the joint declaration of policy which the Western diplomatic source said he believed had gone to the Russians today.

Speculation on Points

Speculation among several official sources was that this declaration contained at least these two points:

1. A call for lifting the blockade of Berlin soon, perhaps next week.

2. A suggested date for the meeting of the foreign ministers of Russia, Britain, France and the United States to deal with the whole German problem. These officials make up the Council of Foreign Ministers. May 25 is the date generally mentioned in informed circles.

Russians Are Reported Slowing Negotiations

London, May 3 (U.P.).—Russia is slowing the negotiations in New York to end the Berlin blockade and hold a meeting of the Big Four Foreign Ministers, diplomatic quarters said tonight.

The setting of dates for the end of the blockade and the Big Four meeting may yet prove the big stumbling block, according to these quarters.

Tydings Says All Would Benefit

Anti-Bias Rider on School Aid Bill Defeated; Tydings Would Confine Help to Poor States

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday, by a 65-to-16 vote, overwhelmingly defeated a proposal to deny Federal education aid to States which segregate Negroes and whites in their public school.

Attention immediately turned to an amendment by Senator Tydings (D., Md.) which would confine Federal aid to 25 States where the estimated income per child of 5 to 17 years is less than $5222.

Under Tydings' amendment 23 States—the so-called richer states—and the District of Columbia would be excluded from any Federal allotment. Under the committeee bill they would receive a minimum allotment of $5 per child.

Senate Minority Leader Wherry (R., Nebr.) said the Tydings amendment had aroused so much interest and potential support that debate on the bill might be prolonged two or three days.

Acting Senate Majority Leader Myers (D., Pa.) told reporters it appeared likely the Senate could complete action on the $300,000,000 annual school aid bill today.

Terming his amendment an "equalization" proposition, Tydings declared that it would confine the expenditure of Federal funds to the announced purpose of the bill—that of bringing up the educational standards of the poorer States.

In round figures, Tydings declared, his amendment would reduce the over-all expenditures under the bill by about 30 per cent. He argued that this should have appeal even to the richer States which under the committee bill were slated "to ride the gravy train" and get $5 per child allotment, which, Tydings maintained, the States themselves acknowledged they did not need.

The "gravy train" reference struck sparks from Senator Ives (R., N. Y.), one of the supporters of the bill. Ives declared that so far as New York was concerned it would have to spend $17,000,000 to be eligible for the $12,000,000 it would receive under the committee bill.

An integrated program to have the Nation as a whole bear its responsibilities for education should not be turned into a "charity" proposition, Ives said.

Senator Gurney (R., S. Dak.) suggested cutting 10 more States from the list for aid, including South Dakota, and leaving 15 Southern States.

"Inasmuch as the announced purpose of the bill is to aid the backward States," Tydings said, "why not confine it right there?"

Tydings told the Senate he did not look with favor on "even a mild encroachment by the Federal Government in the field of States' responsibilities."

The battle against the antisegregation amendment offered by Lodge was led by some of the Senate's most outspoken supporters of civil rights.

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) said adoption of such an amendment would "destroy the bill's chances of passage."

"Much as I detest segregation, I love education more," he said.

Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) remarked

Compromise Fails, Wood's Legislation Is Approved

Vote Is 217 to 203; Measure Keeps Most Taft-Hartley Ideas; Final Action Awaited

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Administration's drive to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act was stopped cold by a Republican-Southern Democrat coalition in the House yesterday.

The House rejected the Administration's own labor relations legislation and then went ahead to approve the coalition-backed Wood bill, a modified version of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Approval of the Wood bill, by a 217-203 roll call vote, was the worst defeat suffered by the Truman Administration in this 81st Congress.

President Truman and the Democratic Party campaigned in the 1948 elections on a platform which had for its No. 1 domestic plank repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, passed in 1947 by a Republican Congress over Truman's veto.

Must Pass Again Today

Technically, the House must again pass the Wood bill today, following a reading of an engrossed copy of the bill, before the measure can be sent on to the Senate.

But it appeared unlikely last night that the Administration leaders in the House, in disagreement among themselves, could swing enough "nay" ballots into the "aye" ranks to reverse the vote.

There is a possibility that the Administration may be able to muster enough votes to recommit the labor legislation to the House Labor Committee for further study.

Sims Substitute Offered

But even success in this maneuver would be but a dry-crust victory, since there is no chance of the Administration's own Taft-Hartley Act repeal bill getting through this session of Congress. Recommittal of the Wood bill would merely leave the Taft-Hartley Act on the statute books.

A group of House Administration leaders, headed by Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.), broke away from Truman-indorsed strategy yesterday and set off on a new course in a desperate eleventh-

Baseball Owners Told to Protect Players From Fans

Cincinnati, May 3 (AP).—Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler gave Leo Durocher a clean bill of health today and demanded that every baseball club in the country take immediate measures to protect its players from the abuse of fans.

In less than two hours, Chandler found there was not sufficient evidence to indicate the New York Giants' manager had "deliberately assaulted" Fred Boysen, a fan of Puerto Rican descent, after a game at the Polo Grounds last Thursday.

"Under the circumstances, the suspension against Durocher is lifted immediately and Durocher will rejoin his team on Wednesday, May 4," Chandler announced as movie and still cameras preserved the happy scene for baseball posterity.

The commissioner took a belt at club owners who have not properly policed their parks and at fans who have abused the athletes.

"There is ample evidence," he said, "that the Polo Grounds was not properly policed on the afternoon of April 28 or Fred Boysen would not have been permitted to move about in the box seat section, for which he had no ticket, and to hurl insulting language which he directed at Durocher principally, and would not have been on the field at the conclusion of the game.

Clay to Retire From German Post May 15

By The Associated Press

Gen. Lucius D. Clay will be relieved as United States military commander in Germany May 15 at his own request.

President Truman, making the announcement yesterday, said Clay deserves the thanks of the American people for his execution of "one of the toughest tasks and accomplishments of American history."

Yesterday's development opens the way for the appointment of the first civilian high commissioner for Germany.

It is an open secret that President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson are trying to persuade John J. McCloy to take that assignment. McCloy now is president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development—a position which carries a $30,000 a year tax-free salary.

Clay has been in Germany as deputy military governor and governor since 1946. He has said his fondest desire is to return to his home at Marietta, Ga., and "go cat-fishing."

Praising Clay for his handling of "a prodigious task of administration," Mr. Truman noted that the four-star general had repeatedly asked to be relieved from his post. He said that various emergencies had made that impossible before now, but that conditions currently have reached a point where the Germans "are about to obtain a greatly enlarged measure

Shreve Says Recession Is Inevitable but Will Give Consumer Relief

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Delegates to the thirty-seventh annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday heard speaker after speaker express an optimistic forecast for world peace and a continuing prosperous domestic economy.

In fact, several tied the two developments together. Earl O. Shreve, Chamber president, in opening the meeting, did so in declaring:

"In the 12 months since our last meeting, I am convinced that the chances for enduring peace have improved. The western nations are united today as never before.

"A strengthening sense of security will provide stimulus to American enterprise, which has developed an unmatched productive capacity that has created the huge outpouring of consumer goods in the last three years.

Shreve emphasized that a "recession from postwar peaks" of business is inevitable. But instead of deploring such a recession, he declared that it will bring "overdue relief to millions of consumers."

"When the current readjustment has run its course, and buying for inventory replacement revives," Shreve added, "business should find itself on a sounder and infinitely more satisfactory basis.

The Chamber president pleaded for lessening of Government controls and lower taxes.

Another speaker, Harry A. Bullis, chairman of General Mills, forecast a prosperous domestic economy for the next three years, if industry and Government take positive steps to maintain it.

Bullis described current conditions as a "healthy shakedown

Arizonan Hunts Petrified Wood, Finds Uranium

Williams, Ariz., May 3 (AP).—A woman's search for petrified wood in a remote canyon of northern Arizona has resulted in the discovery of a rich uranium deposit.

Starting out to collect the specimens in the Vermilion Cliffs area, eight miles west of Lee's Ferry and 10 miles south of the Utah border, Mrs. Maggie Baker of Williams was puzzled by a canary-yellow mineral that saturated the logs in the area.

She took samples to the Arizona Department of Mineral Resources for identification.

Charles H. Dunning, department director, classified the mineral as carnotite a combination of uranium and vanadium. He termed Mrs. Baker's discovery "among the richest deposits uncovered in the Nation."

Defense Calls 2 FBI Agents In Coplon Case

Two FBI agents, called as defense witnesses yesterday in the Judith Coplon espionage case, testified they trailed her on four occasions without seeing Valentin A. Gubitchev.

Defense Attorney Archibald Palmer pulled the surprise move to substantiate his charge that the girl's "movements of honesty and decency were being purposely kept out of the record."

One agent testified Miss Coplon had gone shopping on three days in Manhattan stores and had purchased one scarf.

Miss Coplon, a suspended Justice Department analyst, is charged with taking and copying Government documents to aid Russia.

The Government has charged that Miss Coplon met Gubitchev on three occasions, January 14, February 18 and March 4.

Yesterday's FBI witnesses had testified they trailed Miss Coplon on January 14.

Under questioning from Palmer, Agent Richard E. Brennen testified he had also followed Miss Coplon on January 19, 20, 21 and 22, and February 19.

On the 19th, Brennen said he first saw Miss Coplon come out of an elevator in the Hotel Picadilly with an unidentified man, not Gubitchev. Later in the day, Miss Coplon refused to identify this

Chennault Says China Can Be Saved

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Immediate aid to China at the rate of 350 million dollars a year to bolster the yet unconquered provinces on the periphery of China can still save that nation from complete disaster, Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault told Congress yesterday.

Without this minimum support, to check the Red advance, declared Chennault, Communists will soon be on the borders of Indo-China, Siam and Burma, threatening also to engulf Japan, the Philippines and all of Asia in World War III.

"The best part of China has been lost already by our passivity," declared the wartime leader of the "Flying Tigers," who presently operates an airline in China.

"If we do not act soon, all China will be lost . . . Today we still have a limited choice . . ."

General Chennault testified first at an executive session of the Joint Senate-House "watchdog" Committee on Foreign Aid, and later appeared before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Hospitals Cooperate With Local Practitioners

Baltimore City Health Plan

By Agnes E. Meyer
(Fourth of a Series)

THE PLAN for medical care of the indigent in Baltimore differs from that operating throughout the State of Maryland because the presence of two great medical schools and their hospitals together with city living conditions create different means for the solution of different problems. The eventual success of the Baltimore health plan—it is in operation only six months—may revolutionize the social function of the hospital and its relationship to the community.

It will establish a new pattern for solving medical care of low-income groups on a voluntary basis. It may also set definite limits to Federal control under any contemplated laws for a national medical care program.

Upon completion of the plans for the counties of Maryland, already described in these articles, the State committee on medical care appointed a separate group, with Dr. Lowell J. Reed, vice president of Johns Hopkins University, as chairman, to make a comprehensive study of medical-care needs in the City of Baltimore.

This committee emphasized that it is "erroneous to consider the population as separated into two groups, the ill and the well. Health or its converse, illness, is a graded matter for every individual. In a very true sense it may be said that each person is ill to a certain degree and well to a certain degree . . . Thus the problem of medical care involves a constant screening process that is carried out partially by the individual himself, partially by the physician and partially by the various agencies and organizations that are concerned with maintaining or restoring health."

To gain the support of the medical profession the committee on medical care presented its report to the Baltimore City Medical Society, the Baltimore Hospital Conference and several other medical societies and received their indorsement.

Clinics for Indigent

UNDER terms of a legal contract with the City Health Department, each hospital participating in the new plan agreed to organize and maintain a medical care clinic for the specific benefit of the indigent. The clinic is the administrative center for all clients and all participating local physicians. Two such clinics have now been in operation six months, one under the supervision of the Hospital of the University of Maryland, the other under Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The Johns Hopkins clinic adjacent to the hospital has agreed to care for 8000 relief clients certified by the Welfare Department. Of these 6000 have already registered in response to personal letters sent them by the director of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Dr. Edwin L. Crosby, followed by personal interviews with local physicians by Dr. Harry L. Chant, director of the new clinic.

The functions of the clinic are the following:

1. It accepts enrollments, does a complete health examination of each client and keeps the records.

2. It arranges for the assignment of the client to a local participating practitioner. Both the client and the doctor are free to accept or reject the assignment. Payment to the doctor is on a per capita basis, $7 per year per client. This is the total cost to the clinic per client except for free medicaments which are purchased from any druggist on a voucher. The hospital receives $10 per client per year for its supervision of the clinic and the program as a whole. The local

Alienation Count Rejected

Jury Awards Beloff $30,000 As Damages in Adultery Suit

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Simon Beloff, 67-year-old real estate operator, was awarded $30,000 damages yesterday by a District jury because Leon Spivak, a former business associate, had committed adultery with Beloff's young wife, May.

Beloff had sued Spivak for $100,000, charging alienation of affections and criminal conversation. The jury found that Spivak had not alienated Mrs. Beloff's affections and awarded Beloff no damages on that count.

On the criminal conversation count, which charged Spivak with committing adultery with 31-year-old Mrs. Beloff, the jury awarded Beloff $15,000 compensatory damages and $15,000 punitive damages.

Spivak testified yesterday that he is without assets and has earned less than $1000 this year.

Yesterday's decision ended 18 months of litigation during which Mrs. Beloff first sued her husband for divorce; Beloff filed and won a counter suit on grounds of adultery; Beloff filed the damage suit against Spivak; Mrs. Spivak filed and won a suit for divorce, and Spivak was found guilty of assaulting Beloff and paid a $25 fine.

In his charge to the jury District Court Judge David A. Pine said that since Judge F. Dickinson Letts had granted Beloff a divorce on the grounds of adultery and named Spivak as corespondent, the jury was to consider the adultery charge as having been decided.

It was up to the jury to determine only the amount of damages on the criminal conversation (adultery) count, he said, and to determine guilt or innocence on the alienation count.

Mrs. Beloff took the stand herself yesterday, and charged that her ex-husband had "promised me the world, but given me nothing but cussing, swearing, bickering and violence."

The pretty divorcee said her husband was "mean" and "penny-

New Navy Rocket Achieves Height Of 51½ Miles

The Navy's new experimental rocket, the Viking reached a height of 51½ miles yesterday in its first trial at the White Sands proving grounds in Ne wMexico.

The rocket, comparable to the German 14-ton V-2 in size, reached a speed of 2,250 miles an hour, the Navy announced. This is almost three and a half times the speed of sound.

The Viking's climb is short in comparison with altitude records previously set by the Army's WAC Corporal which reached 250 miles and a German V-2 which went up to 114 miles. Both were fired at White Sands.

But Navy officers said that altitude was not the primary objective of the Viking's first flight. The chief purpose was to test the power plants and the rocket's control system. It carried research instruments, however.

Chases Colonel With Chair

GI Floors 8 Soviet Officers In Vienna Hotel '1-Man War'

Vienna, May 3 (AP).—A husky American military policeman knocked down at least eight Russian officers today and, brandishing an iron chair over his head, chased another around the lobby of the plush Imperial Hotel, Provost Marshal Col. Willard K. Liebel said.

Liebel identified the American as Pfc. Edward J. Touhey of Howard Beach, Long Island, N. Y. He said Touhey was under observation in the locked room of an army hospital here.

Liebel said Touhey had been drinking "but not enough to cause all this disturbance." Touhey was described as over 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighing about 230 pounds.

The "one-map" war against the Russians attracted hundreds of spectators. American headquarters here expected an official Russian protest Wednesday. This is the story as put together from incomplete reports:

Touhey first took on a sentry in front of the Soviet-occupied Grand Hotel in Vienna's international district. He was chased away from there.

He walked across the street to the Imperial Hotel. He knocked down at least one Russian officer in the street.

Then he went into the lobby of the Imperial, which is also occupied by the Russians.

Here, it appears, Touhey attacked 8 and possibly 12 Soviet officers.

As fast as they charged at him he knocked them down.

He ended up by chasing a Soviet colonel around the lobby, threatening him with the iron chair.

Date of Ford Strike Shifted to Thursday

Detroit, May 3 (AP).—An authorized strike of 60,000 Ford Motor Co. workers was ordered ordered today, to begin at noon Thursday.

Local 600 of the CIO United Auto Workers changed plans to call the strike tomorrow after the international executive board set the Thursday date.

A shutdown at Ford's big River Rouge plant would soon tie up most of the company's farflung operations.

Both the local and UAW President Walter P. Reuther charged that Ford had speeded up assembly lines again today. Production rates have been the center of a dispute for several weeks.

Settlement Had Seemed Near

There was no comment from Ford.

The announcements broke out of a clear sky when it appeared settlement was near. After an investigation yesterday, UAW Secretary Treasurer Emil Mazey reported Ford had slowed down the lines to a speed acceptable to the union.

Feeling was running high among River Rouge workers in favor of a strike. Observers believed the international was forced to move quickly after the local's walkout order to offset a difficult situation within the union.

The River Rouge plant supplies many of the parts used in Ford's 48 other plants. A walkout would soon affect most of the 115,000 hourly rated employes in other plants.

Lincoln Walkout Set

The River Rouge strike would coincide with a scheduled walkout of 3,500 workers at Ford's Lincoln-Mercury plant Thursday. An alleged speed-up also is at issue there.

A strike at Ford, first target in the UAW's spring contract drive, could upset strategy in the campaign for industry-wide pensions and health benefits.

Only today the UAW asked Ford for an opening of negotiations May 16, 60 days before the Ford contract expires.

Other automobile manufacturers were idle because of labor stoppages. The Bendix strike at South Bend, Ind., now two weeks old, was the direct cause of making at least 27,500 workers idle.

Hudson Plans Layoffs

The Bendix strike is over claims of a speed-up and wages. Seventy-five hundred are involved.

Because of a shortage of parts supplied by Bendix, the Hudson Motor Car Co. planned layoffs for its 25,000 workers. Nash Motors closed two Wisconsin plants employing 12,000 and Packard shut down one in Detroit, making 8000 idle.

In Philadelphia, the Philco Corp., radio manufacturing concern, was picketed by CIO Electrical Workers. Some 6500 struck Monday for higher pay.

Tells of Program

Truman Still Confident Of Farmers

President Truman said yesterday the Administration's farm program is designed to "create an equitable distribution" of national income.

He spoke in his White House office to 80 members of the Agricultural Editors Association, who are meeting here.

The President also told the farm editors that he is sure the farmers would continue to "realize which side of their bread is buttered."

This part of Mr. Truman's impromptu remarks was not reported in the official transcript made public by the White House.

Hoever, some of the editors gave reporters the paragraph.

The President after saying he had discussed the farm issue thoroughly in a campaign address in Dexter, Iowa, in September, and in subsequent speeches, then went on:

"The farmers apparently realized which side of their bread was buttered. I'm sure they will continue to realize that."

The President told the editors that the farm program originated with a Democratic Administration "and it has been growing and improving ever since."

"We are still trying to improve it and make it more workable—a plan that will create an equitable distribution of the income of the country among those who work on farms, those who work in the processing of farm products, and those whom we call the consumers."

He said that "the objective of the whole business' is to create a sound economy so that "we can face the rest of the world in a position to attain a peace that will last."

Meanwhile milk producers filed a protest yesterday against the Administration's proposed new farm program, saying it would "embody more rigid controls of farmers than have ever been experienced."

In place of the new plan they asked revision of present farm law to increase the income of milk producers by about 181 million dollars this year and almost 500 million dollars in 1950.

Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, was the witness before the House Agriculture Committee.

Check Mixup Halted Opera

Representatives of the National Negro Opera Company and the Musicians' Union yesterday explained the misunderstandings which led to an interruption in last Saturday night's performance of "Aida" at the Armory.

According to the terms of the contract between the two parties, the opera company was to pay the first half of the cost of the orchestra in cash to the union before the rehearsal. The balance was to be paid during the intermission between the first and second acts of the performance, it was explained.

The first payment was made at the proper time but in the form of a certified check made payable to the American Federation of Musicians, the parties said. According to Paul Schwartz, president of Local 161, the check should have been drawn to the contracting agent.

The agent said he accepted the check when he was assured by Mary Carwell Dawson, general director of the company, that he would receive the balance before the performance.

Mrs. Dawson, who paid the balance at once when told of the reason for the interruption, said she had thought it was to be paid at the intermission as originally agreed upon.

The untimely break came just as Napoleon Reed, tenor star in the role of Rhadames, had begun the opera's opening aria, "Celeste Aidi."

5-Point Program Offered

He offered a five-point program for both business and Government. Business, he said, should:

1. Cut prices wherever possible, to enlarge its markets.
2. Maintain purchases for plant improvement and expansion.
3. Exert itself to maintain "full productive employment."
4. Extend corporate ownership by stock sales to small investors.
5. Better public relations. Win public favor by telling its operating story and accepting its full social responsibilities.

On its part, he added, Government should.

1. Remove barriers to investment such as the taxation of dividends both at the source and with the owner.
2. Give industry assurance it will not be crippled by Government controls.
3. Ease the tax burden.
4. Reduce costs and increase efficiency by adopting the Hoover Commission report.
5. Create an atmosphere favorable to business.

He praised industry for its support of the European Recovery Program, but warned against tearing down "the home economy on the pretense of saving it abroad."

Secretary of State Dean Acheson told the delegates the proposed North Atlantic Treaty now before Congress would allay fear in Europe "against armed attack."

"The treaty," he said, "will free the people of western Europe to devote their full thought and energy to the valiant effort to achieve recovery.

"The security value of the treaty," he added, "would be increased by the provision of American military assistance to build up the security forces of western Europe. Yet this military assistance must be provided in such a way that it will not detract from the progress of economic recovery."

Acheson devoted most of his address to the International Trade Organization which President Truman submitted to Congress last week. He termed the ITO charter "the most comprehensive international economic agreement ever negotiated." Its goal, he said, "is the realization of higher levels of material well-being through the expansion of international trade."

Another speaker for the North Atlantic Treaty was Henry G. Birks of Montreal, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. Birks declared that his country and the United States set the pace for the proposed treaty.

At last night's International Dinner at the Shoreham, Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.) declared that the Marshall Plan in its first year of operation had "achieved remarkable success."

Truman Beaten on Labor Bill as House Votes Wood Version hour move to save the Administration from crushing defeat.

Without the official sanction of the White House, without the official backing of the major labor unions, Rayburn and his lieutenants tossed the Sims substitute into the legislative scramble.

The Sims substitute was a "toughened up" version of the Administration's Lesinski bill. It contained seven additions to the Lesinski bill, including the injuction-enforced 80-day cooling off period in strikes affecting the Nation5s safety and an anti-Communist affidavit for both union and company officers.

Designed to attract the vote of the so-called middle-of-the-road Democrats, who had been demanding a "tougher" measure than the Lesinski bill, the Sims substitute did win over a considerable number of Southern Democrats.

The addition of the injunction and the anti-Red oath, however, made the Sims substitute unacceptable to perhaps a score of prolabor Congressmen from the coal mining States in face of John L. Lewis' unyielding opposition to those two Taft-Hartley provisions.

As a result, this group joined the Republicans antiAdministration Dixie Democrats, and two or three left-wingers in beating down the Sims substitute 211-183.

The Republican-Southern coalition then took over and proceeded to "sweeten up" and "soften down" the Wood bill to meet certain objections of organized labor. Then with 11 amendments attached to it, the Wool bill was adopted—with the House acting as Committee on the Whole—by a 210 teller count.

Margin Remains the Same

In its next test—with the House back in regular session—the Wood bill came through on the same 14-vote margin in a roll call vote, 217-203. In this crucial ballot, 146 Republicans and 71 Democrats voted for the Wood bill, 180 Democrats, 22 Republicans and 1 American Laborite voted against it.

Altogether the Wood bill contains some two dozen changes from the Taft-Hartley Act.

Proponents of the Wood bill have declared that it meets most of the bitter criticism aimed at the Taft-Hartley Act by organized labor. Leaders of the AFL, CIO and other unions, have denounced the Wood bill as "worse than Taft-Hartley" because this piece of legislation contains additions to the Taft-Hartley Act.

Here are some of the key provisions of the Wood bill, as approved yesterday:

NATIONAL EMERGENCIES: When a dispute or work stoppage imperils the national health or safety, the President may create an inquiry board which makes a report but no recommendations. Meanwhile, the Government can obtain an 80-day injunction to force a delay in the work stoppage. The Wood bill goes further than the Taft-Hartley Act in this provision, since under the present law the President cannot act until after the fact-finding board reports.

INJUNCTIONS FOR UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICES: Like the Taft-Hartley Act, the Wood bill gives the general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board discretionary power to seek injunction in case of unfair labor practices by an employer. It eliminates the mandatory injunction against employe unfair labor practices—set up by the Taft-Hartley Act—and substitutes discretionary power.

ANTI-COMMUNIST OATH — The Wood bill extends the Taft-Hartley Act's non-Red oath for union officers to officers of management as well. The oaths must be filed by the officers in order for their union or company to obtain the assistance of the NLRB.

CLOSED SHOP—Banned by the Taft-Hartley Act, the closed shop is permitted under the Wood bill in those States which give it specific sanction.

PREFERENTIAL HIRING—Also banned by the Taft-Hartley law, this privilege is permitted unions under certain circumstances under the Wood bill.

REPRESENTATION ELECTIONS—The Wood bill permits strikers to participate in plant union representation elections for six months after walking out. Under the Taft-Hartley law strikers are prohibited from participating in such a vote.

SECONDARY BOYCOTTS—These are outlawed under the Taft-Hartley law, and permitted under specific and limited circumstances under the Wood bil.

The Wood bill retains the Taft-Hartley ban on jurisdictional strikes; prohibition against political contributions by unions; restrictions on excessive initiation fees and "featherbedding"; employer petitions and decertification provisions; restrictions on welfare funds; independence of the Conciliation Service; separation of powers between the General Counsel and the National Labor Relations Board.

The events leading to yesterday's stunning defeat by the Administration began a week ago Tuesday, when the House took up the Lesinski bill, which would restore the New Deal's Wagner management-labor relations act along with certain "improvements" in line with President Truman's campaign pledge.

The Lesinski bill—introduced by Representative John Lesinski (D., Mich.)—had the active backing of all but the extreme left wing labor unions.

After two days of general debate, the House was offered the coalition's Wood bill as an amendment to the Lesinski bill. In its effect, the Wood bill—introduced by Representative Wood (D., Ga.)—wipes out and succeeds the Lesinski bill.

Representative Marcantonio (A. L. P., N. Y.) then offered the original Wagner Act, which had been replaced by the Taft-Hartley Act in 1947, as a substitute for the Wood bill. The Marcantonio proposal won but a few votes.

The House then went on to adopt three "softening" amendments to the Wood bill.

Yesterday, following a series of weekend meetings by Administration supporters, Representative Sims (D., S. C.), who at 27 is the youngest member of the House, rose to offer the Sims substitute as a pro-Administration compromise.

Immediately, Representative Kelley (D., Pa.), leader of the Administration's floor fight for the Lesinski bill, bounced up to oppose the Sims substitute. Kelly, coal mine operator who has been a staunch New Dealer, declared he'd never vote for the injunction or the non-Red oath.

At this point, a check in the House corridors and cloakrooms disclosed that the legislative agents of the AFL and CIO, though acting unofficially, were nonetheless vigorously urging prolabor Congressmen to vote for the Sims substitute despite the injunction. But the legislative agents of the United Mine Workers were equally vigorous in urging the coal mine State Congressmen to oppose the substitute.

Thus, with the Administration Democrats split three ways, and labor split two ways, the Sims substitute went down to defeat even though Speaker Rayburn made one of his rare and eloquent appeals on behalf of the measure.

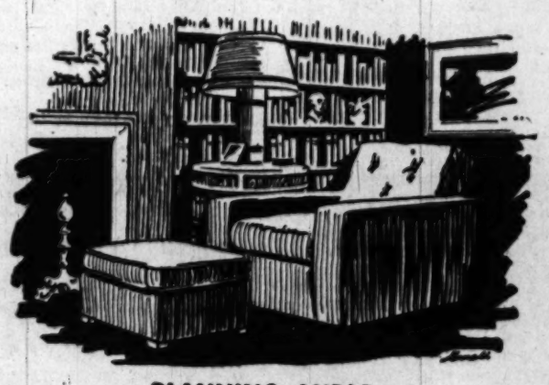
SPEAKING OF Furniture
By ORION L. CAIN



PLANNING AHEAD

When you see a pleasant room, one comfortably arranged and begging to be lived in, you can bet that room was planned carefully in advance.

Planning a room in advance is very important and cannot be overemphasized. An easy chair, for example, is just another piece of well-made furniture. But grouped with an end table that is within reach, a lamp that sheds a soft light, and an ottoman, it offers an invitation to sit down, read and relax. As a unit it provides conveniences and comforts not found with a single or isolated piece of furniture.

Bad structural features of a room are often minimized or overcome by the proper arrangement of furniture.

Make a game out of planning your room setting. Draw a plan of the room, then cut pieces of cardboard to the proportionate size of each piece of furniture. By moving the cardboard furniture you get an actual picture of the room and how it will look. You'll find defects in arrangement BEFORE the furniture is placed, thus saving valuable time and effort.

If there is any way we can help you make your home a better, more beautiful place to live, let us know. Our advice is yours for the asking.

Nationalists Admit Loss of Hangchow

Prizes As Interest

Soviets Plan $4 Billion Lottery-Loan

Moscow, May 3 (U.P.).—The Soviet Union today announced a 20-billion-ruble (four billion dollars) lottery-loan to finance her huge reconstruction program and complete her five-year plan ahead of time.

The 4 per cent interest earned by the bonds will make up lottery prizes worth 160 million dollars and, at the end of 20 years, investors can redeem their lottery tickets, or bonds, at face value.

(The ruble's 20-cent diplomatic conversion rate was used.)

This is the fourth combination lottery and popular loan since the end of the war to help finance Russia's reconstruction and economic development. The preceding three were subscribed to the extent of 77 billion rubles. For sale only within the Soviet Union, the bonds are tax free.

People were urged to spend their wages for three and four weeks on 100-ruble ($20) bonds.

Shanghai (Wednesday), May 4 (AP).—The Shanghai garrison command today admitted the loss of Hangchow, Nationalist escape port 100 miles southwest of Shanghai, to Communist forces.

(Communist control of Hangchow seals off Shanghai by land from the rest of China and closes the trap on Nationalist forces remaining in the Nanking-Shanghai-Hangchow triangle. Their only exit now is by sea.)

The garrison command communique, issued about 10 a. m., said the Chekiang provincial peace preservation corps evacuated Hangchow at noon yesterday after completing a delaying action. This force was all that was left for the defense of Hangchow.

After the peace preservation corps moved out, the communique said, contact with the seacoast resort city was lost.

Hangchow Yields Peacefully

The garrison confirmed earlier Chinese press dispatches which said Hangchow had gone over to the Communists peacefully. There was no fighting in defense of the city, the garrison said.

There was no indication, however, that the Reds were closing in any tighter on Shanghai itself. Trains still were running to Luchiapang, 26 miles westward on the Shanghai-Nanking railway, and to kashing, 50 miles southwest on the Shanghai-Hangchow line.

The Shanghai newspaper Shun Pao said Hangchow was occupied by 4000 Red soldiers yesterday afternoon.

The Communist radio made no mention of Hangchow last night but said more than 80,000 government troops had been taken prisoner at the "conclusion of a great annihilation campaign in the Nanking-Shanghai-Hangchow triangle on April 29."

Reds Take 12 Towns

The Red broadcast from Peiping claimed 12 more towns had been captured south of the Yangtze, mostly with the aid of local guerilla forces. The broadcast said "this takes the peoples (Communist) army as far south as East Kiangsi."

(This would put Red troops more than 200 miles southwest of Shanghai and about the same distance south of Nanking. Kiangsi province, at its closest point, is 225 air miles southwest of Shanghai. This is where hte borders of Kiangsi, Chekiang and Anhwei provinces meet).

Meanwhile, a United States Navy spokesman said United States, British and French naval vessels had left Shanghai's waterfront because of a reported Communist plot to block their passage to the sea.

The spokesman told a news conference "reliable sources" had advised that the Communists would scutle a ship near Mosung, the river port north of Shanghai where the Whangpoo and Yangtze meet.

The spokesman said the plot was "nipped in the bud," and later the American liner President Wilson came to Shanghai and removed 300 evacuees.

British Deny Reports Of Consular Dealings

In denial of recent implications that Great Britain might be considering establishment of diplomatic relations with the Chinese Communists, based on wire service reports that British consuls in China were contacting the Communists, the British Embassy here last night released the following Foreign Office statement:

"My attention has been drawn to agency message stating that diplomatic circles interpret these contacts by consuls with local Communist authorities as meaning that Britain is preparing to recognize the Chinese Communist government. That is not correct.

"The question of the recognition or non-recognition of the Communist administration, which is not affected by endeavor of consuls to make contact with local Communist authorities, has not arisen and is not under consideration here at the present time.

of political and economic responsibility."

The United States, Britain and France have agreed to arrangements for turning over civilian control to the Germans when a provisional government is established for the western zones.

Deputies to Carry On

Each of the occupying powers would have a civilian high commissioner. Those three would exercise general supervision over the German government, particularly in international dealings and matters of internal security.

McCloy, regarded as a favorite for the post of American high commissioner, conferred last Friday with Acheson. He also has been a visitor at the White House.

Pending appointment of a civilian commissioner, Mr. Truman announced that Lieut. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner and Maj. Gen. George P. Hays, Clay's military and military government deputies, will carry on his work.

The Army said no decision has been reached about Clay's successor as military commander. There has been some talk that the job might go to Gen. Mark Clark.

Nationalist 'Tank' in Shanghai . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

A PICTURE EDITORIAL—A Chinese Nationalist tank, one of the type used in the fighting with the Chinese Communists, rolls through Shanghai streets April 26 to be loaded aboard a transport for the south, according to the Associated Press caption. The outmoded vehicle would be as useless in modern warfare as a papier mache tank of the responsibility is ours," he told the latter committee, in many areas "the authority of the Central Government of China has disintegrated, and its capacity to defend itself has become apparent to troops in the field."

Chennault Urges China Aid

But he named nine provinces "where the tradition of local autonomy has always been strong and where there are leaders determined to resist conquest."

These, said the retired combat leader, are the provinces of Kwangtung, Hunan, Kwangsi, Yunnan and Szechwan, and the provinces in the Mohammedan Northwest.

In that area are some 150,000,000 people, he said, substantially in the sector that was "Free China during the war against the Japanese, a base adequate to liberate all China in the end."

Here, he said, we can establish "sanitary areas of effective resistance, without trying to reconquer the China already lost . . . In any area that we assist and work with we must insist that the necessary policies and reforms are carried out to make certain that this will be true."

He said, "There can be no denying that there has been and is widespread corruption in China," but he said this is true of every country made chaotic by extended warfare.

To avoid this in any future program, instead of turning over money "without strings," he said, there should be "adequate supervision by our own men to make sure that we get what we are paying for."

Some supplies to arm resistance, he said, are immediately available from "vast stockpiles of arms and material lying in the Philippines and Pacific areas."

Adequate defense plans "for the next couple of years could be worked out, he said, "at a cost not exceeding the Berlin airlift."

(The Air Corps recently stated that 10 months operation of the airlift cost the United States about 125 million dollars. The China aid figure of 350 million dollars was given by General Chennault yesterday in executive meetings and was not amplified publicly.

Chennault made no direct reference to reports that most of the Chinese air force and navy, plus numerous troops and much of the Nationalist's money reserves have been removed to the island of Formosa, but said he was not considering Formosa as a stronghold of resistance, for:

"Once the mainland has fallen to the Communists, Formosa would be untenable."

Appearing before the Senate committee accompanied by his young Chinese wife, Chennault declared that he would sever his connections with his Chinese airline and offer his services to "a positive policy in China" should the United States adopt such a policy. Chennault now operates an airline transport services, financed originally with UNRRA funds.

Sen. Pat McCarran, chairman of the "watchdog" committee on foreign aid, said Chennault told that group that "no military aid has been given by us to China since 1945."

According to the State Department, China has received about two billion dollars worth of military and economic aid since VJ-Day. McCarran recently proposed a $1,500,000,000 program of new aid to China, while Secretary of State Dean Acheson countered that any program of that scope would be "catastrophic" to this Nation's economy.

Chennault, in a pointed reference to a remark attributed to Secretary Atchison, declared:

"We cannot afford to wait 'for the dust to settle' for, again, when the dust has settled it will have settled on us."

General Chennault said he believes that Gen. Douglas MacArthur shares his opinion that "a communized Asia will eventually produce a communized Japan."

While the Chinese Nationalists have been condemned for allowing most of their equipment to fall into Communist hands, "very little" equipment has been so captured, McCarran quoted Chennault as saying, and said Chennault added:

"It was a Communist trick that when they took a city they moved in one small group equipped with American equipment, and then followed up with Russian equipment."

Monarchists Want Bavaria Kept Separate

Frankfurt, Germany, May 3 (AP).—The Bavarian cabinet held an extraordinary meeting today as a result of Monarchist opposition to the state's joining in a west German republic.

Alois Hundhammer, Bavarian Minister of Culture, declared last Sunday that Bavaria, biggest state in the American zone, "in no case can join a centralistic state."

Monarchist elements within the two big parties of the state, the Christian Democrats and the Bavarian Party, are urging that May 18, birthday of 80-year-old Crown Prince Rupprecht, be made a "day of confession for the Bavarian homeland." Prince Rupprecht is the pretender to the extinct Bavarian throne.

Russians Blame French

Soviet-licensed newspapers in Berlin today declared French leaders, including Foreign Minister Robert Schuman and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, were encouraging Bavaria's monarchists as a means of keeping Germany split into a loose federation of separatist states.

A complaint of an almost opposite nature came from an influential British newspaper, the Manchester Guardian, which accused American and French officials of meddling in German politics to the detriment of democratic principles.

Top Berlin Communist Seeks Moscow Advice

U. S. Frontier Lies in Europe, Bradley Says

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

This country's defense frontier is in "the heart of Europe," Army Chief of Staff Omar N. Bradley told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday.

Bradley made his statement in urging Senate approval of the North Atlantic Treaty, binding 12 nations, including the United States, into a pact for "effective self-help and mutual aid."

"Twelve nations have joined a common pact for security and peace," Bradley declared. "It would be our good fortune, from a military standpoint, if we were to become a member. Within the framework of these subscribed intentions we, with our friends, can progress collectively toward added strength and security."

Bradley pointed out that many of the other nations in the pact geographically "are already in positions where any aggression into western Europe would be a conquest of their homelands."

"I assure you," he told the committee, "that our frontiers of collective defense lie in common with theirs in the heart of Europe."

Bradley also urged that the pact be made effective by adopting the proposed 1130-million-dollar military aid program. He admitted that the military equipment and munitions to be supplied under that program cost this Government far more than the sum requested. In fact, it is proposed that such military supplies be charged against the appropriation for just the cost of "rehabilitation and transportation," Bradley said.

But the other nations in the pact will furnish between $6 and $7 for each dollar this country puts in the military aid program, Bradley said.

The chief of staff expressed confidence that if Western Europe is given time to recover and arm, it will be able to stop an attack by Russia. He declined to make any estimate, in response to queries by Senator Watkins (R., Utah), as to Russia's military strength or to state whether the Soviets have yet developed an atom bomb.

"Plans for the common defense of the existing free world must provide for the security of Western Europe without abandoning these countries to the terrors of another enemy occupation," Bradley told the group. "Only upon that premise can nations closest to the frontiers be expected to stake their fortunes with ours in the common defense."

"In World War II we had the costly experience of making, on the Normandy Beaches," Bradley related, "the greatest amphibious assault in history to gain a toe-hold in Europe from which we could launch the final attack for victory.

"The beachhead cost the United States 21,000 casualties in the first 10 days. I was a commander in that sea-to-lad assault, and I hope that the occasion shall never arise when I might again be called upon to participate in such a hazardous and costly operation."

Bradley listed as "some of the things we expect to gain by joining this pact of collective security" as:

1. "Eleven friendly nations assure us that they will stand with us."

2. "Eleven friendly nations signify that, to the limit of their abilities to resist, no aggressor could count them among his satellites."

3. "From a purely military standpoint, the combined population of these 12 nations is more than 300 millions of people—an important military-political factor to the group of nations, and especially to our nation, in the event we are ever called upon to defend ourselves in another total war."

4. "The industrial potential of our 11 friends is not small. Their combined steel production in 1948 is estimated at 37 million tons, while we produced 89 millions in the United States. Their natural resources, and their ability to manufacture the weapons of war as well as the basic life-giving commodities of peace are important contributions to the security of the western world. And like the population question, the transfer of the industrial potential of any one of these nations, from our combination to any aggressor, would be a double liability."

Bradley then declared "there is no price tag on these pledged commodities in security, for they are never for sale.

Czechs Rebuffed

Loans to Tito, Franco Being Negotiated

By Edward E. Bomar
Associated Press Staff Writer

Prospects for American loans to Franco Spain and Marshal Tito's Yugoslavia apparently looked up yesterday at the same time the door was slammed on Communist-run Czechoslovakia.

As aries of finance and political developments reflected American policy in the struggle of the West versus Russia and the Soviet bloc:

1. The State Department disclosed that Spain has been authorized to negotiate directly with the Export-Import Bank — even though highly placed Government officials stated the United States still rates the Franco regime a poor credit risk and has withdrawn none of its political objections to Francisco Franco.

2. Diplomatic authorities reported that the Bank is now giving active consideration to a revised plea from Yugoslavia for a 50 million-dollar credit. A Yugoslav application for a 500 million-dollar loan had been gathering dust for three years.

Czech-U. S. Talks Suspended

3. The head of a Czech official delegation announced that financial negotiations with the United States have been suspended. He said he retained hope for American trade credits but knew no substance for the hope. Officials made plain the answer, for the present, is "no."

Spain is reported to be seeking 200 million dollars for reconstruction and rehabilitation projects. Officials said it is likely that the bank will turn down the loan request unless Franco cleans house economically along lines which have been suggested by Paul Culbertson, American charge d'affaires at Madrid.

The grant of authority to deal with the Bank appeared nevertheless a further new step toward improved relations with Spain as a potential ally of the West.

The Czech official, Evzin Loebl, Deputy Prime Minister for Foreign Trade, conferred at the State Department with Assistant Secretary Willard Thorp. Loebl is returning shortly to Prague to obtain a new financial expert to replace Dr. Hugo Skala, former No. 2 man in the delegation. Skala resigned as soon as he reached the United States last month and asked to remain here permanently as a political refugee.

Negotiations opened last month for a settlement of American compensation claims for property seized and nationalized by Czechoslovakia especially since the Communists took control 14 months ago. The Czechs gave notice at the outset that in order to pay claims they would have to have American credits of some 50 million dollars or more. They also sought relaxation of controls the United States has imposed on exports to eastern Europe.

Yugoslavia's loan proposal was revived after Ambassador Sava N. Kosanovic talked with Thorp last month. The Tito regime, which has warmed up to the West slightly since its break with the Cominform, wants help in carrying out its current five-year plan.

Aside from saying the application is being actively considered, officials gave no hint of its chances.

Lake Success, May 3 (AP).—Argentina proposed today that the United Nations invite the Vatican to give the Catholic views on international rule for Jerusalem.

The move came in debate in the General Assembly's 58-nation special political committee on Israel's application for U. N. membership.

The committee adjourned until Wednesday morning without acting.

The Arab-Moslem countries resumed their fight on srael's bid. Israel hopes to be admitted before the Assembly's scheduled adjournment May 14.

Lebanon urged postponement until Israel agrees to international rule over Jerusalem and to allow Palestine Arab refugees to return home.

The chief obstacle to immedaite approval of Israel's plea to become the fifty-ninth U. N. member has been concern expressed in various delegations over the Israeli position on Jerusalem, Arab refugees and the assassination last year of Count Folke Bernadotte, U. N. Palestine mediator.

Argentine Delegate Rodolfo Munoz told the committee his country was "warmly in favor" of Israel's admission to the U. N. He declared, however, that the three problems should be discussed in the committee because of "public opinion, especially as far as those of Roman Catholic religion are concerned."

He proposed specifically that the Vatican be invited to send representatives, "if they deemed it necessary or appropriate," to express the Catholic Church's view on an international regime for Jerusalem and its holy places.

Pope Pius XII recently said the church favored some sort of international administration.

Premier Warns Israel Of Unfinished Tasks

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 3 (U.P.).—Premier David Ben-Gurion tonight told Israelites on the eve of the first anniversary of their independence that their job is not yet finished.

The premier's words boomed over loudspeakers in the crowded Tel Aviv streets. He told thousands of visitors who swarmed into the capital at dusk and began celebrating the anniversary of the proclamation of the state of Israel:

"Let us not be complacent. The sword still is girded around our loins. Let us not boast, as do men who have taken if off.

". . . Let us not delude ourselves that our work is finished. We are still at the beginning. The road ahead is long and hard and there are still many obstacles."

The Jews proclaimed the existence of their state last May 14, a few hours before the British mandate in Palestine ended.

Congregational Women to Hear Mrs. Meyer

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the chairman of the board of The Washington Post, will address the Women's Guild of the Westmoreland (formerly Mount Pleasant) Congregational Church at its first meeting in the new church building today at noon.

Guests of the guild will include residents of the community adjacent to the church and the Women's Bible Class of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Meyer's talk will be preceded by a business meeting of the guild at 11 a. m., and will be followed by a luncheon.

The Westmoreland church building is situated at Western and Massachusetts aves. nw., and has been in use since Palm Sunday.

Panama Official Held In Killing of Ex-Aide

Panama, Panama, May 3—(UP) Public Works Minister Sergio Gonzalez Ruiz was arrested today after the fatal shooting of an ousted government employe yesterday.

Authoritative sources said Gonzalez shot the fired employe, Cleveland O. Robinson, 41, in self defense. They said Robinson, a Panamanian of West Indian origin, went to the minister's office to protest his dismissal and threatened Gonzalez.

Steps Taken By Abdullah

Amman, Trans-Jordan, May 3 (AP).—Trans-Jordan made ready today to receive three representatives from Arab Palestine into the cabinet, a move implying extension of King Abdullah's rule beyond the Jordan.

Anexation of some Palestine Arab territories is regarded here as an accomplished fact, whether it is officially announced or not.

Premier Tewfik El Huda Pasha resigned with the rest of his government and was ordered by Abdullah to organize a new cabinet which will include three ministers from Palestine.

Usually reliable sources said two Moslems and a Christian Arab will be chosen. Palestinians under consideration are Rohy Bey Abdel Hady, former assistant secretary to the Palestine government under the British mandate; Khousy El Khairy, former district officer of Jaffa, and Antoun Atalla, a judge.

Many Frequencies Are Established

Recognizing the swollen demand for mobile radio services, the Federal Communications Commission yesterday ordered a sweeping reallocation of frequencies among such services. It put many which it previously considered experimental on a permanent basis.

The order, effective July 1, culminates four years of study by the commission and will affect more than 200,000 mobile, nonbroadcast units now operating in industry, public safety, shipping, land transportation and public utilities.

It gives priority to those services which the commission considered necessary to public safety, which could not accomplish their purposes with wire lines and which benefited the greatest number of persons.

Newspapers using mobile equipment experimentally up to now were put in a permanent category called the "Relay Press Radio Service," and assigned four frequencies on a shared basis with movie companies using portable transmitters on location.

The commission said it felt that this will reduce complaints from newspapers which heretofore have experienced considerable interference from industrial users on the same frequencies. In addition newspapers will be allowed to share 100 other frequencies with industry.

Taxicab jamming was also alleviated by the assignment of six additional frequencies to the two already granted, with all eight now permanently available. Cab systems have also been considered experimental up to now.

The order also creates a new "Automobile Emergency Radio Service" with three exclusive frequencies designed to "speed the dispatching of emergency road service repair vehicles by associations of private automobile owners and by public garages."

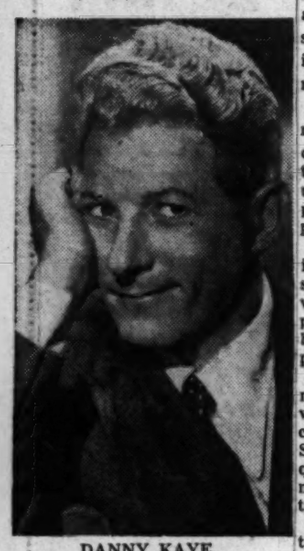
Though it acknowledged the successful experiments carried on with radio facsimile transmission of photographic material, the commission said "it is unable to determine at this time that this type of service is in the public interest" and provided only experimental usage.

In a dissent to the order, Commissioner Robert F. Jones rejected the concept of parceling out frequencies to individual services on "a private and unintegrated concept."

Calling the process "inherently wasteful," Jones favored the operation of nonbroadcast facilities by communications common carriers or coordinated systems which he said "would insure greater utilization, flexibility and efficiency in the use of admittedly scarce and insufficient radio frequencies."

The order requires all holders of experimental licenses to cease operations by November 1, 1949, or submit applications for new licenses at least 60 days before that date.

Injured Comedian Heeds Tradition



DANNY KAYE,
the American comedian who has been one of the greatest hits in the history of British vaudeville went on with his show in the Palladium Theater in London, despite having been struck by an automobile as he left the country home of George Bernard Shaw. When he paled midway through his act and walked, hunched slightly forward, off the stage as the orchestra played "God Save the King," his audience still thought it was another of Kaye's gags. In his dressing room arrangements were made for an emergency X-ray examination to determine his injuries

Corporation Law Deplored

The District Bar Association yesterday urged approval of a revised corporation law for Washington at a hearing before the House District Judiciary subcommittee.

Roger J. Whiteford of the local bar group said the present corporation act, enacted in 1901, was so antiquated that "corporations are almost always formed elsewhere."

The attorney explained that the revised measure would require all out-of-town corporations to register with a newly created superintendent of corporations "so we will then be able to find them for purposes of local taxation and serving process."

The committee also heard testimony on five senate-approved bills that would make minor changes in estate settlements here.

Atkins Hearing Today

The District Real Estate Commission will hold a hearing today at 10 a. m. in the District Building on an application by Philip T. Atkins, 1219 God Hope rd. se., for a real estate broker's license.

The commission said it plans to investigate the "actions and conduct" of Atkins in selling a residence at 1110 C st. se. while licensed as a real estate salesman.

Lawyer Sues State On Income Taxes

A Government tax attorney who doesn't like to pay State income taxes in Maryland when his "real home" is in Illinois took the matter to court yesterday.

Herman T. Reiling, 106 E. Leland st., Chevy Chase, Md., filed suit in Federal Court in Baltimore asking that Maryland's comptroller be restrained from collecting 1944 and 1945 income taxes, plus interest and penalties, from him.

Reiling, assistant chief counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, said he shouldn't have to pay Maryland income taxes because:

1. He is employed by the Federal Government in Washington, works entirely within the District of Columbia and is paid there.

2. Although he lives just across the District line in Chevy Chase, his real home is in Illinois. He came from there. He always votes there. He belongs to the Illinois Bar Association and to a Democratic political organization there. If he lost his Government job he would go back to Illinois.

Liens Against 2 District Aides Filed for Unpaid Tax Bills

Tax liens for unpaid District income taxes have been filed against Assistant Attorney Gen. A. Devitt Vanech and Walter F. Bramhall, chief clerk of Municipal Court.

Notices filed in District Court yesterday disclosed tax judgments against Vanech for $193.85, and against Bramhall for $71.12.

Bramhall referred reporters to his attorney, Robert W. Burton, who could not be reached. Vanech was out of town, but an aunt, Mrs. M. Rich said "it was undoubtedly an oversight—he's a busy man."

S. J. Kidd, supervisor of accounts and collections, said Bramhall has personally arranged to pay the back taxes. Kidd said he had not heard from Vanech.

According to Allan Brooke, assistant District income tax administrator, records show Bramhall did not pay a penalty for filing late in 1945 and owes part of his 1946 and all of his 1947 income tax.

Brooke said records indicated Vanech filed returns but did not pay any taxes for 1946 and 1947.

that in his opinion the most ardent supporters of the Lodge amendment were not the Negro groups but the Chamber of Commerce, which termed all Federal aid to education socialistic.

Senator Morse (R., Oreg.) said it would violate the Constitution for the Federal Government to try to tell the States they cannot have segregated school systems.

Says It Would Cheat Negroes

Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) said the amendment would not promote nonsegregation "one jot or tittle." The net result, he said, would be to cheat Southern Negroes out of a decent chance at education.

"If we allow the Federal dollar to be used to enhance and perpetuate segregation in education, how can we refuse to see it used to perpetuate segregation in other fields?" Lodge asked.

"If we say it is all right to have segregation in our elementary schools, how can we say that it is not all right to have segregation in schools that teach law, or medicine, or engineering?"

He accused the Senate of "defeatism" in avoiding the civil rights question on issues like housing and education.

"I say let the filibuster come—and let us break it once it has come," Lodge shouted.

Margaret Rose To Meet Pope

Rome, May 3 (AP).—Vatican sources said today plans for Pope Pius XII to receive Princess Margaret Rose "are now quite definite," though the date has not yet been set.

British Protestant leaders objected to the possibilities of such a meeting before the 18-year-old princess flew to Italy last Wednesday for a month's vacation. A new protest developed in London.

"We feel that any meeting between a member of the royal family of this Protestant state and the head of the Catholic Church would be improper," said Secretary J. A. Kensit of the British Protestant Truth Society. "We thought that point had been settled long ago, when Britain broke away from the Roman Church."

Princess Margaret plans to come to Rome Thursday. She arrived at Sorrento aboard an Italian navy corvette today from the Island of Capri. She and her party visited Pompei this afternoon.

Sir Stafford Cripps, British Chancellor of the Exchequer who also is visiting Italy, had a 30-minute private audience with the Pope.

The Vatican, meanwhile, prepared a reception Wednesday for Belgium's Regent Prince Charles, whose name some Italian newspapers have tried to link romantically with Princess Margaret. The prince is 45.

"Kidding" Boy Drowns

Nashville, Tenn., May 3—(AP)—Bryon Eugene Earhart's swimming companions just laughed when he screamed for help and dropped out of sight in a lake yesterday. They said he was a good swimmer and "wsa always kidding that way." An hour later the 17-year-old boy's body was recovered.

pinching." She said he forced her to work in his real estate office all day, then prepare food and clean a 16-room house at night. She said he inspected the garbage to see how much food was being thrown out.

Under examination by Spivak's attorney, Mrs. Beloff said she had lost affection for her husband, who was also her uncle, when he had demanded sexual relations eight days after she returned from bearing him a daughter at the hospital.

She testified that she had become pregnant on other occasions, but that her husband had provided her with a drug to induce miscarriage.

Earlier in the three-day trial, Beloff had charged that Spivak provided Mrs. Beloff with the drug.

The criminal conversation count by Beloff charged that Spivak and Mrs. Beloff had committed adultery on "numerous occasions" in March and April of 1947, "with the full knowledge" of the marital status of the Beloffs.

HARRODS LTD

One hundred years of service

ON the occasion of their Centenary, Harrods of London send cordial greetings to their many friends in the United States of America, and throughout the world One hundred years ago, in the muddy main street of Knightsbridge Village, Henry Charles Harrod became the new owner of a tiny grocery shop, lit by paraffin lamps and dealing mainly in tea, soap and candles. Cradled in the heart of the world's mightiest city, Harrods took its measure from the greatness which surrounded it, and grew and prospered until it became an important and worthy part of the London to which it so proudly belongs.

Now, in 1949, from that same site, Harrods merchandise is distributed throughout the world, forging links of trust, service and friendship with the peoples of all nations. May this great House continue to serve its valued friends for many years to come, even though they be scattered over the four corners of the earth.

With pride in the past and faith in the future, those who control the destinies of the House of Harrods today, look forward confident and determined that the best is yet to be.

County Manager Made Permanent

By a 4-3 vote, Montgomery County Council yesterday gave Acting County Manager I. G. McNayr permanent status in the $10,000-a-year post.

The action, taken at the council's second legislative session, saw the first serious division of council members since the charter council took office January 18.

McNayr

Mrs. Dorothy S. Himstead, one of three council members named to draw up recommendations on permanent appointment of a county manager, was said to be leader of the move against McNayr's permanent appointment.

The other members of the manager committee were Councilmen Lewis Meriam and P. Garland Ligon.

In explaining her vote against McNayr, Mrs. Himstead said she believed the subcommittee had found "a better qualified candidate."

Councilmen Ligon and Augustus R. Shelby also voted against McNayr. Supporting McNayr were Council President Frederick P. Lee, and Councilmen J. Douglas Bradshaw, Thomas C. Kelley and Meriam.

McNayr joined the county government in 1946 as purchasing agent. He was later named county supervisor and became acting manager last January after the council replaced the county's commission.

Introduced at yesterday's session was a bill to give the council authority to crack down on county zoning violators.

The bill, sponsored by Council President Lee, also would set up a department of inspection and licenses under a county director.

Would Handle All Permits

The director would be responsible for administration and enforcement of laws relating to building permits as well as permits dealing with amusement places, refuse collection, hucksters, plumbers and numerous other activities.

Under the proposed law, State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson would be "authorized and empowered" to appoint an assistant county attorney to assist him in prosecution of zoning and other law violations.

Another bill introduced yesterday would set up a department of safety, under a director, composed of divisions of police and fire protection.

A third bill introduced would repeal laws made obsolete by adoption of the county's new charter last November.

Fairfax Gets Big Bonus in School Costs

Fairfax County may be able to build a group of emergency four-room schools at $10,000 less than the $45,000 apiece estimated several months ago.

This report was given to the county school board yesterday by M. G. Norman, architect, whose Richmond firm is drawing plans.

Basing his estimate on costs of current school building projects on which his firm is working, Norman said he thought the schools could be constructed for about $30,000 apiece. The school board has estimated it will cost $5000 more to equip each school.

The board hopes to let contracts on four of the schools before the end of May. They are planned for Weyenoke, Hollin Hall, Penn Daw and Tyson's Corner.

The board yesterday voted to keep all first and second graders in school until 3:20 p. m. next year except where they are on half-day shifts. Children in these grades now are permitted to go home at 2 p. m. when transportation is available.

W. T. Woodson, Superintendent of Schools, said the practice has created too many complications, particularly that of scheduling extra runs by school buses.

Takoma Cabbie Dies of Monoxide Gas Poisoning

A 23-year-old Takoma Park cab driver died of monoxide poisoning yesterday, about an hour after he was found unconscious in his gas-filled cab on a deserted road near Muirkirk, Md.

Maryland State Trooper William Crisp said he found Robert Eugene Buzzard, 2 Domer ave., Takoma Park, slumped over the wheel of the cab, in which a rubber tube had been connected to the exhaust pipe and extended through a partially opened window.

Crisp and Trooper William Thomas administered artificial respiration to no avail, and the man was pronounced dead on the arrival of Dr. J. T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner.

Dr. Maloney withheld a death certificate pending further investigation.

Hospital Bonds Voted, Then Voided

Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday authorized sale of bonds to enlarge the Prince Georges General Hospital, to include long-promised provision for Negro patients.

Less than an hour later, however, they changed their minds and rescinded the action, fearful that the action might affront persons promoting school expansion.

Dr. A. K. Besley, superintendent of the hospital, and William Bodie, member of the board of directors of the hospital, and Paul H. Kea, the architect, urged the board to take immediate action to forestall loss of $413,050 in Federal funds, contingent upon appreciable progress by July 1.

The commissioners agreed action must be taken and upon motion of Commissioner John H. Beall, voted to sell $800,000 in bonds authorized by the 1947 session of the General Assembly and also to provide $150,000 remaining from a previous $400,000 issue.

The additions would provide a three-floor double wing which would include obstetrical, contagious, pediatrics, surgery and Negro wards, a building to house the county Health Department, and a central heating plant.

The hospital at present has no facilities for Negro patients.

The commissioners formally authorized issuance of $650,000 in bonds by the board of education for school needs. The issuance had been approved informally several weeks ago.

The board approved sidewalks and street projects for three special improvement districts subject to having sufficient funds in the special improvement fund. They were Riverdale Heights, Radiant Valley and North Woodridge.

Tuck Stresses Role of State In Education

Fork Union, Va., May 3 (AP).—Governor Tuck said today that education is the Government's second most important function.

At ceremonies here marking the 50th anniversary of Fork Union Military Academy, Tuck said:

"The first function of government is law enforcement. After that government's prime function is to educate youth and provide schools."

The Governor told the academy's six hundred cadets, board of trustees and several hundred alumni that average teacher pay in Virginia places the State third in the South. Since 1940, he said, teacher pay in the State has gone up from 9 million to 34 million dollars.

Fake Bill Suspect Shot by U. S. Agent

Chicago, May 3 (AP).—A quick-drawing secret service agent shot and critically wounded a man on a North Side street today in a trap Government men said netted them $100,000 in fake $20 bills. Agents said it was the biggest haul of its kind in Chicago in years.

Seized were Dixie Richmond, 42, and Irving Morris, 43 a saloon owner. Richmond was wounded over the left eye by an agent who said he thought Richmond was reaching for a gun. Richmond was unarmed.

Morris was placed under $25,000 bond pending an examination May 12. He was charged with conspiracy to deliver counterfeit money.

Richmond was placed under heavy guard in the U. S. Marine Hospital.

Harry D. Anheier, in charge of the Chicago Secret Service office, said that a month ago an agent got acquainted with Richmond, won his confidence and made a deal to buy $100,000 worth of counterfeit bills for $30,000.

Richmond was shot, Anheier said, when he kept a midnight appointment with the agent. Morris, the agent added, was following Richmond's cab in his own convertible coupe. The agent who fired the shot was not identified.

Miss Bergman Sees Husband

Rome, May 3. — (UP) — Ingrid Bergman and her director, Robert Rossellini, met today with her husband, Dr. Peter Lindstrom, and a lawyer in Messina, Sicily, to discuss their triangle. They were expected to issue a statement Wednesday.

The meeting, for which Lindstrom flew 7000 miles to attend, took place in a room in Messina's Grand Hotel. An attorney summoned from Rome by Rossellini joined in the conference.

Reports from Stromboli Island, where Rossellini an dthe Swedish actress have been filming a picture, have said Miss Bergman intends to divorce her surgeon-husband and marry Rossellini.

None of the four would answer the telephone, but a clerk at the Grand Hotel said the four of them had gone into "a room." Dr. Lindstrom has been in hiding since his arrival in Italy last week. Miss Bergman and Rossellini, while posing for pictures happily holding hands, would neither confirm nor deny the stories of their love affair.

A Rome newspaper reported, meanwhile, that American producer Howard Hughes, annoyed by the goings-on on Stromboli Island, is cutting off the cash for the movie Miss Bergman and Rossellini are making.

Chamber Musicale

A program of chamber music by Mozart and Schubert at 8 p. m. tonight will open a two-day observance of National Music Week at the University of Maryland Coliseum.

A combined concert by the University symphony orchestra, band and choral groups, will be offered Thursday at 8 p. m. The first number of Thursday's program, Bach's "Prelude," will be dedicated to Helen Patricia Brown, former first flutist in the orchestra, who died on Easter from injuries received in an auto accident.

Arlington Federation Opposes Rosslyn Gas Consolidation

The Arlington Civic Federation last night went on record as opposing a Senate bill which would allow consolidation of the Rosslyn Gas Co. with the Washington Gas Light Co.

Hearings on the Senate bill, which would allow repeal of a maximum gas rate statute, are being held now before the Senate District Committee.

In authorizing its representatives to oppose the bill at the hearings, the federation voted that if Congress does enact the legislation, it also require the consolidated gas company to have uniform area rates.

The federation also asked that Congress authorize the Federal Power Commission to regulate gas rates over all of Greater Washington.

Arlington County already has asked the FPC to investigate gas rates charged by the Rosslyn Gas Co. in the county.

Last night, Malcolm Miller, chairman of the federation's legislation and legal action committee, said if the Senate bill passes "the consolidated company will be in a position to throw Arlington's rate case into utter confusion."

Also approved by the federation was a petition asking that its representatives be allowed to testify at a hearing June 13 on proposed telephone rate increases sought by the Chesapeake & Potomac Co. of Virginia.

County School Board Chairman Barnard Joy, another speaker at the meeting, said that under its 1949-50 budget, Arlington's School Board should be able to eliminate half-day sessions in at least half of its first and second grades by September.

Speaking for himself only but indicating probable board action, he told the federation that nearly all half-day sessions should be eliminated by February of 1950 with the remainder on a full-day basis the following September.

Joy said that the estimated $2,200,000 granted to the schools by the County Board from local tax sources last Friday is an increase of $450,000 over the current fiscal year's budget.

He said he felt the budget will make it necessary to chop the $100,000 originally slated for teachers' pay increases in half, and to eliminate the hiring of 15 extra teachers originally planned by the School Board.

"CHANGE OF LIFE"
What A Doctor Discovered For Women Who Feel Nervous, Weak, Tired Out, Run-down

• Are you going through "change of life?" And at this crucial time are you nervous, irritable, weak, due to functional causes? Yes, just worn out and so nervous you could cry—or scream?

Big-Time Builder Becomes Citizen

A 39-year-old contractor who has constructed an estimated 10,000 housing units since coming here in 1906 as an almost penniless immigrant finally became an American citizen yesterday.

He is William Magazine of 1333 Ft. Stevens dr. nw., and president of the Standard Construction Co., Inc., which has a dozen offices here and has been active in apartment development construction.

Born in Russia in 1890, Magazine came here to become an apprentice carpenter and gradually rise in the building industry.

Asked why he waited so long before assuming citizenship, Magazine declared:

"I really don't know. I should have done it long ago."

The main secret to success in his field, he said, is:

"Work hard. Treat everyone including labor right. But work hard and keep on working."

He was among 45 persons sworn in yesterday before Judge Matthew F. McGuire of District Court.

Also included was the Rev. Engelbert M. Axer, who said he recently obtained his doctorate from Georgetown University and is on his way to the Catholic University in Tokyo.

German by birth Reverend Axer came here 10 years ago and says, "I intend to teach the Japanese democracy in action."

Citizen Paper Loses Lawsuit

A $225,000 District Court suit charging the Merchants and Manufacturers Association and four stores here with restraint of trade was dismissed yesterday.

The suit had been brought by the District of Columbia Citizen, a monthly publication of the Federation of Citizens Associations here, and alleged that the merchants group was acting illegally in declining to authorize advertisements in the publication. Coplaintiff was Paul P. Walsh, editor of The Citizen.

In ordering dismissal of the suit, Judge Ben Moore of West Virginia, who was visiting here, stated:

"What we have here is simply a case of a trade association, in the exercise of a lawful function and for the benefit of its members, declining as an association to advertise in plaintiffs' newspaper.

"Plaintiffs may be injured thereby, and the circulation of the newspaper may be seriously impaired and its profits reduced; but in my opinion there does not follow as a natural result any detriment or injury to the public in restriction or suppression of competition, or in any other of the numerous evil results against which protection is afforded by the Sherman Act."

Defense Calls FBI Agents

man to reporters, except to say "He's the big mystery man."

She and her male friend went to the Century Theater to see "Kiss Me Kate," the agent testified, and the surveillance was discontinued.

On the 20th, Miss Coplon shopped in New York without making a purchase, and again on the 21st visited New York stores, this time buying a scarf. On February 19, Miss Coplon visited friends in Fresh Meadow, Long Island, Brennen testified.

Throughout the day, Prosecutor John M. Kelley jr., asked only a few questions, although the Government is now presenting its case.

Palmer crossexamined Brennen, Agents Richard Hradsky and Leo J. Gauthier for four hours.

Palmer's questions were not restricted to the espionage case, but dealt lengthily, among other subjects, with the following:

1. Is it possible for a woman to enter the ladies' toilet in Pennsylvania Station in New York on one level and leave at a different level?
2. What did Brennen eat during a four-hour conference in New York between FBI agents and Government lawyers preparing the Coplon case?
3. What songs were featured in the musical "Kiss Me Kate?"
4. What color are Miss Coplon's eyes and what is the condition of her teeth? In this digression, Palmer was trying to determine whether she had gritted her teeth when she met Gubitchev.
5. What qualifications as an FBI agent did Hradsky have after spending six years in the wholesale grocery business in Missouri on graduating from law school?

Parade of Objections

Palmer's comments to Judge Albert L. Reeves, Kelley and the jury elicited a parade of objections from Government lawyers.

At one time after he had been reprimanded by Reeves, Palmer said, "I beg your pardon. I don't want to tread on your honor's proverbial corns. I know your honor does not have real corns."

Once when Kelly objected to a Palmer question, the New York defense lawyer said, "What's the matter, I'm not in heat."

On occasion Palmer offered the jury some of the five boxes of cough drops and lozenges he keeps on the jury rail.

When Palmer asked one agent if he knew Kelley had prosecuted Axis Sally and Kelley objected, Palmer said "Oh, what's the use. I'm trying to make him famous and he won't let me."

Chart Objection Overruled

Palmer objected to the admission in evidence of charts prepared by the Government tracing the movement of Miss Coplon and Gubitchev on January 14. Palmer claimed they represented hearsay evidence, but was overruled by Judge Reeves, who said the objection was "wholly without merit."

Agent Gauthier testified that he had supervised the drawing of the Government charts after conferences with approximately 18 FBI agents who had been engaged in trailing Miss Coplon and Gubitchev.

Early in the morning session, Palmer made his third demand for a mistrial, on the grounds his client's case had been prejudiced, when Kelley accused him of a deliberate lie.

Palmer asked Brennen: "On January 14 did you see Gubitchev paw, neck, hug or kiss this thin little girl less than 5 feet in height?" Brennen said he had not.

FBI agent Thomas J. McAndrews was called to the stand late in the afternoon to testify about trailing Miss Coplon on February 18, but was withdrawn to give Palmer an opportunity to cross-examine Hradsky about trailing her on January 14.

Kelley objected that the flow of the Government's case was being interrupted when Palmer made defense witnesses out of Government witnesses, but was overruled.

Turk Deputy Airs Sailor Party 'Scandals'

Istanbul, Turkey, May 3 (U.P.).—A Turkish legislator said today that "corrupted" was too mild a word to describe what happened to young Turkish girls at a party here attended by American sailors.

Newspapers had said the girls were led astray by the "drunkenness and scandals" of the party, but Parliamentary Deputy Hasan Dincer said in Parliament debate that "things took place which were even worse than reported by the press."

Statements Differ

He stated that pictures taken at the party in the Istanbul YMCA did not include "the scenes which wounded our hearts."

Earlier, Education Minister Tahsin Banguoglu had declared that "our investigation reveals no drunkenness and no scandals as reported in the press," but Dincer refused to accept the statement.

"I realize the importance of friendly relations between Turkey and America, but I do not believe relations will be damaged by an operation to cut out such cancers," the deputy said.

Banguoglu retorted that "Dincer's statements can only cast suspicion on the morals of Turkish girls and spread false fears that our educational institutions provide pitfalls for them."

The education minister admitted, however, that the party had been held without official permission, and said that any persons responsible for irregularities would be punished.

Most deputies felt that the matter should be dropped after today's debate in Parliament. If Dincer continues his attacks, however, the parliamentary group of the dominant Republican People's Party may meet to prepare a further defense of the government.

Salvationists Plan To 'Save' Alcoholics

Ambitious plans to salvage alcoholics here by spiritual conversion were disclosed yesterday by local Salvation Army officials.

The plans call for establishment of a local Harbor Light Corps, the Salvation Army's service arm for alcoholics, and construction of a $125,000 center on I st. west of 9th st nw., to house the corps' activities.

Details of the plan were discussed yesterday by Capt. Tom Crocker, rehabilitated drunk and dope addict who now heads Harbor Light Corps work in Chicago's "skid row" sector. Capt. Crocker was brought to Washington to study local conditions and make recommendations for the Washington organization.

He addressed members of the Civitan Club of Washington, at the Salvation Army's Social Service Center, 1st and F sts. nw., in a luncheon meeting yesterday. A public dinner, at $1.50 a plate, is scheduled for 7 p. m. today for all persons interested, it was announced.

Washington, said Captain Crocker, has no single section comparable to Chicago's "skid row," where "from 50,000 to 75,000 so-called hopeless drunks" are congregated. Instead, he explained, police keep drunks on the move there, creatng "what could be called 'floating skid rows.'"

Salvation Army officials designated the trouble zones most frequented by drunks as the 9th st. sector and at 5th and G sts. nw. Although efforts to salvage alcoholics by conversion have been continuous here, they said progress has lagged for lack of the special organization, the Harbor Light Corps.

They pointed out that an average of 1000 drunks a month are sentenced to the District Workhouse, at Occoquan, Va., by District Court judges, "to keep our streets relatively clear of drunks." But imprisonment is not the answer, they said.

Col. W. W. Bouterse, local Salvation Army chief, said decision to proceed with the $125,000 center had been made even though $25,000 is still needed to complete the program.

The $40,000 site has been purchased, and $60,000 has been collected towards the construction project, he said. Plans, he said, provide for a two-story front structure with one-floor rear wings.

Captain Crocker said about one third of the alcoholics on the streets are veterans of World War II. Harbor Light Corps activities to save them through conversion include morning-after conferences, personal interviews, group therapy, prayers and Scripture readings and employment rehabilitation.

The work, he said, supplements activities of regular alcoholic clinics and such organizations as Alcoholics Anonymous.

'General Hell' Is Abroad in World, Doctor Comments

A "general hell and misery" are abroad in the land today, wreaking fearful damage on the mental health of millions of people, Dr. Julius Schreiber, former director of the National Institute of Social Relations, asserted here last night.

Addressing the annual dinner of the Washington Neighborhood Councils at the YWCA, the president of the Northern Virginia Mental Hygiene Society served up this bleak picture of the results on masses of people of today's social, economic and political climate:

"Ulcers are formed, blood pressures go up, aches and pains abound, family relationships are disrupted, hate is displaced and fastened upon innocent scapegoats. There is general hell and misery, and neither man nor society benefits from it. The battleground involves the mental health of men. And the outcome is in doubt."

The outspoken doctor listed some of the sources of the "gnawing anxieties" he said were being generated in millions today:

"Fear of war, fear of loss of savings due to runaway inflation, fear of loss of job, fear of depression. Prejudice anddiscrimination, no housing, inadequate medical services, unequal education opportunities."

He clearly warned his audience—which included many social workers—that "it may not make us popular to cry out against the social, economic and political problams which undermine mental health."

"For some of us," he averred, "to do so might even jeopardize our jobs or other sources of livelihood—but we cannot escape reality. And a conscience does exist."

Mrs. Isabel Ward, chairman of the coordinating committee for all seven Neighborhood Councils, presided and reviewed activities of each council in mental hygiene.

Miss Bennett Gives Final Voice Recital

Mary Alyce Bennett, contralto, gave her final recital of the season last night in the Institute of Contemporary Arts.

The young singer's programs at the institute have been consistently noteworthy. Last night she sang music of the Seventeenth, Eighteenth and Twentieth centuries, with Bach and Purcell from the early days.

Contemporary writing was presented by James Barnes, Perry Marshall, William Graves, and Paul Hindemith. Miss Bennett's method of singing serves her more than adequately, permitting her to give full attention to the sensitive delivery of words and music.

She understands fully the difficult idiom in which she moves much of the time. Neither pitch nor rhythm disturbs her, no matter how abstruse. From young James Barnes there were two songs to Auden poems. The accompaniment to the first was in the economical style approved by middle Stravinsky, with ornamentation which brought the Capriccio to mind.

In both songs the voice line proceeds independently of the piano, but quite sympathetically.

Hindemith's cruel ballad of the "Belle Dame sans Merci" is overlong. Wonderfully conceived, it fails to sustain interest in the listener. But its dramatic moments were ardently handled by both Miss Bennett and her accompanist, Harry McClure, whose work in this song, as in the Bach arias which closed the evening, were models in every way.

Court Amends Murder Verdict

Bland, Va., May 3 (AP).—A jury verdict, amended by the court, tonight convicted Ralph A. Newberry of first degree murder in the slaying and beheading of his wife and fixed punishment at 20 years in the State penitentiary.

In the unusual climax to the eight-day trial in Bland County Circuit Court, Judge V. L. Sexton, jr., refused to accept one second degree verdict which was contrary to his instructions to the jury, and then amended the sceond verdict which failed to state the degree of conviction.

East Bethesda Center Plans to Be Discussed

Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission plans for the proposed East Bethesda recreation center will be outlined at a mass meeting of Bethesda citizens at 8 p. m. today in Lynnbrook School.

Planning Commission representatives slated to speak are Commissioner Clarence C. Keiser, Secretary J. F. Nicholson and Chief Engineer A. Morton Thomas. They plan to distribute printed copies of the proposed plan, to be used as a guide in the discussion.

Clean-Up Week

One thing about Clean-Up Week—nobody comes around asking for a contribution to pay another guy to do a job. Amid the endless fund drives, this is a welcome respite. Here is a campaign everyone can pitch into for himself. It is a challenge to every citizen to earn the satisfaction of making his own individual surroundings safer and better to look at. And the sum total of success is the generous satisfaction of having helped make Washington a more beautiful and a healthier city.

What do safety and health have to do with it? Quite a bit, if you stop to think of it. The effect of a can of paint applied to fence or garage or house is more cosmetic and psychological than hygienic, perhaps. But even with paint the sanitary results are not to be overlooked. And when it comes to accumulations of dirt and trash the health considerations are paramount. Such refuse makes ideal breeding ground for germs and for germ-carrying vermin and insects. As higher disease rates in slum areas show, it is a menace to health, and disease knows no bounds.

Officially, Clean-Up Week is the 10-day period from April 30 to May 9. It is good to have this intensive reminder that cleanliness is a civic virtue. But the Board of Trade, which is sponsoring the campaign, recognizes that it is a year 'round job. A strong effort now and a continuing program through the remainder of the year will pay off in many benefits that could not be gained by paying somebody else to undertake the task.

Pulitzer Awards

It would be natural if we were somewhat prejudiced in favor of the Pulitzer Awards for work in American arts and letters during 1948. For the prize for editorial writing goes to The Washington Post's Herbert Elliston and to the Boston Herald's John Crider.

Other winners in the newspaper field include several journalists who are well known on the Washington scene. Mr. Price Day deserved honor for a thorough and painstaking series on India's first year of independence for the Baltimore Sun. This was journalism at its best. Many newspapers think that news consists only of sensations, and our Baltimore contemporary is to be complimented on this evidence that it thinks otherwise. The real function of newspapers is to provide the kind of first draft of history that Mr. Day wrote. Mr. C. P. Trussell, of the Washington Bureau of the New York Times, has served his newspaper long and faithfully in the Capital. His daily reports from Capitol Hill have a wide following because Mr. Trussell has won a reputation for accuracy and illumination. He is recognized by the Pulitzer committee for "consistent excellence in covering stories of national importance." We were particularly glad to see that truly great picture, "Babe Ruth Bows Out," singled out for the photographic award; it was Nathaniel Fein's, and it appeared in the New York Herald Tribune.

There were few surprises in the list of winners in literature and the arts. By common consent Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman is one of the most gripping plays which has been seen on the New York stage in a generation. Both the New York critics and the judges of the Antoinette Perry Award had already honored the playwright.

Perhaps there will be a difference of opinion on the novel of the year, but James Gould Cozzens' Guard of Honor is an excellent war novel, written with ease and expertness. Robert E. Sherwood's Roosevelt and Hopkins was, of course, an obvious choice. There must have been a ticklish problem involved in the selection of the best volume of poetry. Peter Viereck gets the award, with his first collection, Terror and Decorum, and we imagine that except for the unrepentant followers of Ezra Pound, there will be little dissent in literary circles. Mr. Viereck is one of the avant garde school, but to the layman he is intelligible, and Mr. Pound wrote only for the esoteric.

Aging Population

In an address before the New York Chapter of the Chartered Life Underwriters, Louis I. Dublin, of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., presented some startling figures illustrating the changes that have occurred in the age composition of the population during the last half century. Owing to restrictions on immigration, declines in the birth rate, and sharp reductions in infant mortality, the proportion of the population in the older age brackets has been steadily increasing. In 1900, for example, only 4.1 per cent of the 76 million persons living in the United States were 65 years of age or older. By 1950 it is estimated that more than 11 million people, or 7.7 per cent of the total population, will be found in this old age group. Moreover, the life expectation of the average individual at 65 is now 13 2/3 years—2 years greater than in 1900, and the upward trend is expected to continue.

Mr. Dublin notes that even at the peak of our war effort only one third of the men and women 65 years of age and over were employed by others or self-employed while currently only 25 per cent hold jobs. However, in case of men, the proportion now employed is about 43 per cent, whereas only 9 per cent of women 65 years of age and over are employed. It is evident from these figures that old age dependence has assumed alarming proportions, since few of the people in these advanced age groups have been able to save enough to maintain themselves without outside aid. Their position is rendered all the harder by increasing urbanization which has resulted in a concentration in towns and cities of approximately two thirds of the population. Farm life offers many more opportunities for useful work to the aged than city trades and industries. Hence the social and economic changes of the past half century have aggravated the problems of old age dependence and at the same time deprived the community of the services that many able-bodied aged men and women might have rendered under more propitious conditions.

Most discussions of relief for the aged revolve around plans for financial aid. That, of course, is of primary importance, since existing provisions are sadly inadequate. Average old age insurance benefits, for instance, amount to little more than $22 per month and only 1½ million of the aged are now drawing these restricted benefits. Other governmental and railroad pension schemes cover about three quarters of a million persons, and about 1½ million are supported by returns from investments or individual annuities. Some 2½ million are in receipt of old age assistance (public charity) and about two million are dependent on aid from friends and relatives. This survey emphasizes the necessity of extending the coverage and increasing the benefits of Federal old age insurance, not only for the sake of the aged themselves, but to reduce the burden imposed on the families of the indigent aged.

In many cases old people are prevented by physical disability from taking gainful employment. But there are large numbers of unemployed in the 65-years-and-over group. Their earnings would also help to make work for younger people by enabling them to buy more goods and services. Mr. Dublin points out that old people can render useful service in public libraries and hospitals, and all sorts of social and community activities, thereby contributing to the public welfare as well as relieving the boredom and feeling of frustration that overwhelm so many of them when condemned to a life of enforced leisure. He also suggests that large concerns could well afford to engage an old-age counselor to advise employes how to make adjustments that will enable them to utilize their talents and exploit their hobbies after retirement. There is also need for special housing accommodation for old people that would combine privacy with the provision of special services that would lighten household work. In conclusion, Mr. Dublin warns that the problem of the aged is becoming "increasingly acute" and unless something is done to meet the situation right now "intolerable conditions may develop a decade or two hence."

Limiting Education

It was strange to see so constructive a legislator as Senator Lodge resorting to the pernicious device of an antisegregation amendment to the aid to education bill. This amendment was of a piece with the rider Senator Bricker attached to the housing bill—a rider which, in the kind of support it attracted, seemed directed far more at defeat of the bill than obtaining nonsegregated housing.

There was little doubt that the Lodge amendment would be beaten. But, it consumed a day of the Senate's time and served to embarrass those Senators who had to go on record as voting against unsegregated schools in order to achieve the larger aim of Federal aid. This was cheap politics. It was the more unfortunate because of the direct bearing better education has on the eventual abolition of segregation. Surely Senator Lodge realizes that racial problems will not be solved by any such quick legislative maneuver.

Fortunately the Senate also rejected a companion Lodge amendment which would have debilitated the aid program by limiting Federal expenditures to $10 per child in all States. There was, to be sure, a certain narrow logic to Senator Lodge's contention that the wealthier States, which may receive as little as $5 per child under the present bill, will contribute to the poorer States, which may be allocated up to $29 per child. But this point was competently answered by Senator Taft. The bill, he said, "is not a transfer of the education money from one State to another State, but it is a tax on the Nation as a whole to meet a national problem."

In a nutshell that is the justification for Federal aid to education—a program designed to eliminate the disgraceful disparities in education by helping most those States least able to help themselves. It is far fairer, as Senator Aiken observed, to meet this issue on its merits than to attempt to kill the bill with amendments.

Peripheral China

General Chennault's view of the situation in China rings true, even though he is not a disinterested witness; but there is no merit, in our opinion, in his suggestion for military and economic aid for peripheral China. A popular misconception is that China is divided between Nationalist and Communist. There are, as General Chennault reports, many areas—and sizable ones at that—which are more or less autonomous. Some are in a kind of loose relation with Chiang's Nationalists, others, however, are independent. The breakup of China, indeed, is going on at the same time as the consolidation of Northern and Central China under the Communists. The emergence of regional groups equally with the spread of communism represents a reaction from the overcentralization policy as well as the bankruptcy of Chiang Kai-shek.

To be sure, the outlook is that for some time the foreign powers may have to deal with local authorities in China. But aid has no business among the dealings. The military aid bill of last year prejudiced this Nation's diplomacy toward the Chinese people in a way that will take years to correct. Moreover, it has been used by the Russians as proof that the Cominform analysis of world affairs is correct, viz, that capitalism has to prop up feudalism and reaction and imperialism everywhere in order to survive. This is the way to encourage international communism, not to combat it. There is another danger, and that is that the Communists may get the American arms which General Chennault would consign to peripheral China, as they got the arms that America gave to Chiang Kai-shek. Some of the commanders in the independent areas might prove to be as efficient "supply sergeants" for the Communists as Mao Tze-tung is reputed to consider Chiang Kai-shek and his lieutenants.

Mr. Lovett's Negative

Senators would be kidding themselves if they voted for the Atlantic Pact on Mr. Lovett's theory that no military commitments are involved. The heart of the treaty is Article 3, reading:

> In order more effectively to achieve the objectives of this Treaty, the Parties, separately and jointly, by means of continuous and effective self-help and mutual aid, will maintain and develop their individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack.

If this does not impose a contingent military responsibility upon the signatories, words have no meaning. Secretary Acheson to his credit made this clear, emphasizing the obligations undertaken under the pact rather than the lack of them.

At the same time this assumption of responsibility is the only way of waging peace in this dangerous world. To say ahead of time that in certain circumstances the United States would fight is to insure that there will be no necessity to fight. If Hitler had known that the United States would take up the challenge as soon as he embarked on armed aggression, who can doubt that the world would have been spared the holocaust of the Second World War? In history all aggressors, according to Dr. Gilbert Murray, have waged war on the basis of a miscalculation of opposing forces. The United States, by putting aggressors on notice of its intentions, is therefore doing a service for peace. The pact would be simply an idle gesture if the Senate acted on Mr. Lovett's interpretation and left obligations in the realm of uncertainty.

MY VIEW

Great city sleeping; exhausted at last
It rests, under its weight
Of granite and steel
Never quite still, groaning as it turns
A giant subdued.
On sentry duty, the statues stand guard.
Majestic moon, unfriendly and cool
Sailing high among the white clouds
With beauty reflected
So aloof and pale, fostering dreams
Far up there.

Great city awakening; the fingers of light
Directed by the sun now thrust backward
The night shadows; Morning breaks clear.
Awake now, the giant begins anew
Refreshed and eager for this repeating day.
Clamor assails and puppets walk
Along the streets.

"New China"

Will you permit me to point out that your editorial of May 2, "New China," is based on a news agency report, which unfortunately misinterpreted a remark by a British Foreign Office spokesman and has therefore given rise to an entirely false idea of the policy of the United Kingdom toward the Communist authorities in China.

This report gave the misleading impression that the Foreign Office spokesman had said that Britain was "trying to establish friendly relations" with the Communist authorities in China. In fact his statement was that the United Kingdom government would continue to try to make contacts with the Communist authorities in China, and he added that these contacts would not be described as "diplomatic relations."

In answer to a question as to what kind of relations it was thought to establish, the answer "friendly, we hope" was given. The meaning of these remarks is quite clear, particularly when they are taken in conjunction with the statement by the Prime Minister, Mr. Attlee, last week that endeavors are being made "to reach day-to-day working arrangements with the local (Communist) authorities."

It is important that the true position should be known both for the record and because of the false impression which a misleading version might give, at a time when it is vital that the existing close harmony of the views of the American and British governments on the China problem should be appreciated and maintained.

"Nonsegregation Policy"

I have read, with some interest, your April 22 editorial "Nonsegregation Policy."

Certainly one of the substantial Negro newspapers of the United States is The Pittsburgh Courier. Within the past year an outstanding contributor to the Courier—William Schuyler, a Negro, did a splendid series on State capitals. In a place like Lincoln, Nebr., where there are only 1500 Negroes out of a population of better than 75,000, there are all sorts of discriminations. One of them, having to do with hospitalization, would be a disgrace to the Southern City of Augusta, Ga. In Augusta, Negroes are admitted to and treated in University Hospital. The hospital not only employs Negro help but trains young Negro nurses.

If I were a Negro in Washington I would certainly look with a jaundiced eye on the suggestion advanced in the Klein bill to combine the white and colored schools. The reason was set out in the Courier as to a large New York State city where out of 1400 school teachers, for the nonsegregated schools there was not a single Negro teacher; where not a single Negro girl was in training as a nurse; where two typewriter manufacturing firms had only three Negro employes, all janitors, and where out of some 4000 public utility employes there was one single Negro, a janitor.

There are two differences in the segregation practiced in the South and the North: Here we admit it, but we see to it that the colored man has the privilege to work just about anywhere he wants and build his own business. In many places in the North segregation is practiced exactly the same, but not admitted. In addition, the Negro is not given a fair chance to go out and earn his way in many cases.

Patent Office Delays

The Hoover Commission has been very remiss in that it has concentrated too much on reducing costs and not enough on how to get more for our money by overlooking the Department of Commerce Patent Office.

It takes a year for the antiquated Patent Office either with incompetent help or inadequate salaries and a lack of modern equipment such as a full line of business machines, to answer the quests in a patent letter.

If the Patent Office had modern business equipment throughout, such as electric typewriters, equipment that locates information instantly and drops it on an examiner's desk, the inventor might proceed to perfect and market his invention for public benefit instead of waiting seven years in deferred hope as is an actual fact now.

Ruhland's Suggestion

I read with interest the report in your April 28 edition of statements by Dr. George C. Ruhland before the District Commissioners and before the Senate District Subcommittee.

I readily agree that over crowding is a definite health menace. I further agree that immigration of dependent persons and families, regardless of race, greatly aggravates the very acute housing situation here in the District. But what Dr. Ruhland was not quoted as saying, is the fact that we have here in the District large areas of slum blighted properties which, if cleared of all but the barest minimum of housing occupancy requirements, would be slum areas and of the worst sort.

I am also in the fullest accord with the idea that persons of questionable economic status should be made aware of the impractical aspect of inviting others to come, share, and drain upon such insecure assets. But Washington, D. C. in spite of its virtues, is no "paradise" for any low income group no matter what the race, color, or other means of singling it out.

Anti-Communist Law

I recommend that the 10 citizens of Maryland who are contesting the legality of the recently enacted Maryland anti-Communist law be awarded the "Best Citizens of the Year" medal. There are many citizens indignant over this absurd infringement of civil rights, but a ringing cheer goes to those who took the initiative in this case.

"Funny Business"

Realizing the great contribution that The Washington Post has always made to the cause of national defense and the importance of giving to the new Secretary of Defense the support that his difficult post requires, I am constrained to make a few observations on the editorial published April 28 under the title, "Funny Business."

By this time everyone interested in national defense knows there has been some funny business in regard to the supercarrier. There has also been considerable confusion in the minds of the editorial staff of The Washington Post. The three editorials published on the question indicate: (a) someone planted a story on The Washington Post; (b) the editor of The Washington Post developed some qualms of conscience; and (c) he tried gracefully to wiggle out of a position made untenable by the facts.

The facts published in Mr. Sullivan's letter of resignation have not and cannot be contradicted. Since I am not a military expert, I do not know the arguments for or against the U. S. S. United States. But I do know that an effective military organization requires consultation and the use of the best military intelligence available.

The Navy can probably be an effective unit of defense without a supercarrier, but it cannot function without the leadership of men trained to pass judgment upon its sphere of defense. Perhaps some money may be saved but a lot of disinterested, patriotic brains were tossed overboard in the solution attempted of the problem posed by the supercarrier.

The Secretary of the Navy is merely the spokesman before Congress, the people, and the President, of the men whose opinion on naval matters must be respected. I do not think your editorial was very generous to Mr. Sullivan. Nor was it particularly helpful to Secretary Johnson for there is a very simple solution of this and other similar problems which must arise. It might have been suggested.

Unification was born of the desire to separate the air forces from the ground forces of the Army. Certainly the importance of air power in World War II called for a reevaluation of our strategy in national defense.

Never in the history of our country has there been such bitter feeling between service groups as now exists. That feeling reaches deep down into the ranks. It is a source of genuine peril to the national military establishment. It will continue to exist as long as hasty legislation or hasty decisions place one group, earnestly striving to perform its duty, at a disadvantage.

Of course I was saddened when my old carrier, the U. S. S. Saratoga, was the victim of an atom bomb at Bikini. We can dispense with it and possibly with the U. S. S. United States (on that I am not competent to judge) but we cannot have a Navy when its leadership is publicly discredited and humiliated by men who know nothing of naval warfare.

THE RT. REV. MAURICE S. SHEEHY
Catholic University of America
Washington

Editor's Note: If there was confusion in the minds of Post editorial writers, it was confusion generated by the mountainous obfuscation hindering our efforts—and every other newspaper's efforts—to get the facts about the supercarrier decision.

Romance And Ideology

By Malvina Lindsay

Future Complications

THE AGE-OLD excuse for getting into trouble, "the woman tempted me," seems to be reversing itself in the international field. Judith Coplon is the third American woman of recent alleged disloyalty to her country to indicate that a masculine foreign heart interest led to her predicament.

For the second time a Russian man figures as the charmer of an American girl who supposedly had access to secret official papers. Elizabeth Bentley, reformed Communist, told of how her infatuation for a Communist agent was an incentive to her attempted espionage. Judith Coplon's attorney maintains that his client's romantic regard for Valentine Gubitchev, Russian engineer arrested with her, led an innocent girl into the toils of the Justice Department. Part of the defense of Mildred Gillars (Axis Sally), recently convicted of treason, was that a Nazi Svengali influenced her conduct.

Meanwhile in the Soviet Union around 1000 wives of American, British and other non-Russian former soldiers are being kept from joining their husbands, even though the United Nations General Assembly has called on the Soviet government to lift the bar. Thus are the two opposing ideologies of the world being cast in the roles of Montagues and Capulets, Hatfields and McCoys, as romance reaches across boundaries of both geography and political faith.

HUMAN complications growing out of the division of the world into two bitterly opposing camps are bound to increase no matter how tightly iron curtains may be drawn. Several Americans in official capacities in Moscow have already renounced their country, led, it is understood, by romantic attachments to Russians. Trade and diplomatic activities and the growth of transportation and communication are bound to bring Communists and non-Communists of opposite sex and personable appearance together in some degree throughout the world.

Judith Coplon, whether innocent or guilty, is an example of how trouble may ensue from this. Considering her background, college record, personality and character, it seems likely that her emotions helped lead her into her present trouble. If she is innocent, then she is a tragic example of how human relationships may be crushed between the ideological millstones of East and West. If she is guilty and was influenced emotionally by Gubitchev, there is no use to ask why her college did not educate her more effectively "against communism." For throughout history the heart has led some strong characters to sacrifice their patriotism.

The fact that Miss Coplon's attorney emphasizes the emotions of his client may seem strange to Soviet followers of the trial. For the Soviet government apparently has never considered such an individual—or possibly "bourgeois" — matter as the emotions of the Russian wives it is keeping apart from their foreign husbands. Yet at least 350 of these women who are married to Americans say they want to be with their husbands. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told the U. N. General Assembly.

THE WAY in which human relations are getting tangled up in the cold war was further illustrated at the recent regional meeting in Lebanon of the United Nations Status of Women Commission. Only the Soviet delegate opposed the recommendation for an international convention on the nationality problems of married women. Such a convention, the commission hopes, would lead to international understandings allowing a married woman to take either her native nationality or that of her husband.

However, capitalist-Communist romance presents its greatest problem when secrets of state are believed to be involved—as in the Coplon case, and in the cases of the American Embassy employes in Moscow who chose to become expatriates. About the only answer to this seems to be more careful selection and longer probationary testing of persons for confidential positions in the Government. Or perhaps a more foolproof solution would be the employment of persons beyond the age for international romance—if there be such an age.

Italy In World War I

In your April 19 issue, I read a communication entitled "U. S. Conscription and Pact Responsibilities."

One point in the article stated that in the first World War the "Italian army was of very little use to us when it was on our side."

Italy mobilized and equipped, through her own industries, five million men, and from 1915 to 1917 battled a notable part of the strong Austro-Hungarian army, with bloody offensives on the Russian front. When Russia gave up, Italy was obliged to fight alone against the entire Austro-Hungarian army reinforced by several German divisions.

At the time of the armistice, the Italian front was defended by 52 Italian divisions, 2 French and 1 British and 1 American regiment. Italy's part in helping to win the First World War is clearly evident by the terrific losses sustained—600,000 dead and 1,500,000 wounded and maimed.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

No Nation Is An Island

TOKYO.—Here in Tokyo, with its curiously American surface atmosphere, the events in China seem almost as distant and improbable as they must in the comfortable United States. Yet, according to those best equipped to know, what is happening on the Asiatic mainland has a simple meaning for Japan.

If the Communists' drive south in Asia is not somehow halted, there is only one probable result. In the course of time, Japan will add her vital industrial potential to the Kremlin's vast Asiatic empire. Then we shall have thrown victory away with a vengeance.

There are all sorts of reasons—political, psychological, historic—why this is so. But the most obvious reasons are economic. To reach some understanding of what a Communist China and southeast Asia would mean to Japan, it is necessary to examine some of the hard facts of Japan's postwar economic position.

One of these hard facts is that American women no longer wear silk stockings. Before the war, the United States took about a quarter of Japan's exports. The bulk of this trade was in raw silk. Now, thanks to nylon and other silk substitutes, the raw silk, wound with magic skill from the mulberry cocoons by the tiny Japanese factory girls, is piling up in warehouses in Yokohama and other ports.

Another hard fact is that with a population of 80 million there are already too many Japanese in Japan. And according to American experts, if the present rate of population growth continues, there will be more than 100 million Japanese by 1975—perhaps 115 million.

THERE IS, whatever the moral considerations, only one practical answer to this almost cancerous population growth. That is birth control. Curiously enough, Japan is perhaps the only country in the world which has consciously limited its population in the past. In the long period of isolation, the Shoguns kept the population at a steady 28 million by a brutal expedient. Japanese midwives were important government servants, and they had the gruesome task of strangling the excess population at birth.

According to Nora Waln, the novelist, who knows postwar Japan intimately, isolated fishing communities still practice similarly brutal methods of balancing their population and their food resources—those who must be eliminated are chosen by lot.

Yet, even if less horrible and more practical methods of controlling Japan's population growth are adopted (as Japanese Premier Yoshida has just proposed), Japan's economic problem is not solved. It merely becomes soluble. For although every square foot of Japan's arable earth, even in the great cities, is tended like a garden, the earth cannot feed more than about two thirds of Japan's 80 million people.

The conclusion is obvious. Japan's trade with its natural trading area in China and southeast Asia must be even heavier than it was in the imperial past. Japan must get food for its people and raw materials for its industries. In return, Japan must send finished goods, from locomotives to textiles, to North China, Korea, Indo-China, Siam, Malaya, Burma, Indonesia and elsewhere in Asia. There is no other way, except permanent economic dependence on the United States.

THE POLITICAL meaning of these economic facts may be summed up in one sentence. People can do without locomotives and even without textiles, but they cannot do without food. A Communist China is a sufficiently forbidding prospect for Japan. But if Japan's whole natural trading area, southeast Asia as well as China, is allowed to succumb to a single, ruthless political authority, an economic dagger will then be permanently pointed at Japan's throat.

It is nonsense to suppose that a non-Communist Japan could hold out indefinitely, alone in a Communist Far East, except as a permanent colony of the United States. And although the occupation has thus far been serene, transforming Japan into a colony is unthinkable. Ultimately, the United States would face a fiercer resistance in nationalist, homogeneous Japan than even the British faced in India.

No nation, to paraphrase Donne, is an island unto itself. Of no nation is this more true than of hungry, crowded Japan. Difficult as it is sometimes to believe, it is true of rich, prosperous America, too.

America's first job in Japan is to make a fundamental change, before it is too late to change, in the way American power is exercised here. But the second job far transcends the first. Somewhere, somehow, the Communist drive south in Asia must be brought to a halt. If this second job is shirked, there can be only one result. We shall eventually face a menace in the Pacific far graver than the menace we fought the long, bloody, heroic, cruel Pacific war to overcome.

Early '49 Hay Fever Sneezes Set Off by Elm Tree Pollen

If winter comes, can spring, clouds of pollen, and multitudes of sneezes be far behind?

Any allergy sufferer already can tell you . . . "no." Spring was a little early this year and the elm trees, first to pollenize in this area, started in February, a month ahead of schedule.

The puffed eyes, red noses and ragged dispositions of hay fever sufferers also were ahead of schedule.

Dr. Eloise Kailin, Washington representative for the National Pollen Survey Committee, has been keeping a slide record of pollen all year round. She reports the tree pollen stage is about over. Next will come grass pollens. Then, in mid-August, the big sneeze will be on as ragweed pollen flies.

Tht tree pollens this year were denser than in either 1947 or 1948, Dr. Kailin said. Peak count, for all kinds of tree pollen, was 531 grains per square centimeter (about thumbnail size) on April 23.

Last year, the peak tree pollen count was 317 (of all kinds) on April 20. And in 1947, the peak was 259 grains, on May 1.

Counts on April 23 as compared with April 30 and May 1 showed a decrease from 30 to 21 grains in paper mulberry; from 264 to 16 in oak; from 25 to 9 in maple and from 90 to 5 in sycamore.

Washington Calling

Middle Way To A Labor Law

WHILE members of the House struggle toward some sort of agreement on the terms of a labor bill, many eyes are fixed on a dark cloud on the immediate horizon. It could mean a tornado, a cyclone or, maybe, just an old-fashioned blow.

Childs

The cloud that disturbs many members is the imminent fourth round of wage increases in coal, steel, automobiles, electric manfacturing. Out of this fourth round can come a national shutdown such as occurred three years ago with such far-reaching political and economic consequences.

The power of the unions in these industries and their ability to shut down the Nation's economy has a lot to do with the decision Congress will make. It is doubtful that a substitute labor bill can be finally approved that does not contain a provision giving the Government the right to ask the courts for an injunction to stop a strike threatening a national emergency.

When they are candid, Administration leaders will admit this. Realists within the trade unions also see it as more or less inevitable and, when they are talking privately, they acknowledge it will not be too harmful.

There was one dramatic move that might have assured the timid. That would have been a public statement signed by all top union leaders declaring that they would abide by a presidential request for a 30-day cooling-off period before calling a Nation-wide strike. The Administration bill provides for the 30-day period on order of the White House.

For a time Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin was hopeful that such a statement would be forthcoming. But one of the signers would necessarily have been John L. Lewis, and the boss of the United Mine Workers is sternly conditioned against any action in common with his fellow union bosses.

THE STRUGGLE to agree on a substitute for the Taft-Hartley Act shows up the political divisions within the Democratic Party more clearly than any other issue. In the House you have right, left and middle. While the boundary lines are not closely drawn, nevertheless the three groups are very definitely divided.

To the left are the Democrats who go all out for the Truman pledge to repeal Taft-Hartley. They come, for the most part, from large cities where the labor vote is decisive. Some come out of the labor background and they owe their presence in the House to the active support of the unions.

To the right are the Southern Democrats, joined with a majority of the Republicans. Their objective is to keep just as many of the restrictive provisions of Taft-Hartley as they can get away with and still defeat the Administration. Representative John S. Wood of Georgia has given his name to the bill that is the core of this strategy.

These men are from the South, where the unions are still driving hard to organize the great mass of the unorganized. The fear is that the South's advantage in lower wages, which has helped attract away Northern industry, would be lost with organization.

IN THE middle group are nearly a hundred Democrats. They come, many of them, from border States. In this middle group are such able and conscientious members as Representative Mike Monroney of Oklahoma City.

Theirs is not a happy position. It's much easier to be all for or all against an issue. But these men, who like to think of themselves as liberal and progressive on most questions, are an essential part of the Democratic Party.

What the middle group fears is a Nation-wide strike in coal or steel in midsummer. Without any legal safeguards, such a strike could run on until industry was slowed to a virtual standstill.

It was inevitable, in my opinion, that Speaker Sam Rayburn should consider the feelings of this middle group. To ignore them was to risk driving them into the camp of the Republican-Southern coalition.

Labor's deep distrust of the injunction in any shape or form is understandable, since its abuses in the past have been many and flagrant. That distrust is shared by men in both parties and particularly in the Senate. It comes close to abrogating the basic right that no man shall be compelled to work against his will. In the present era of troubled uncertainty it may be necessary as a temporary expedient. But it should be considered as merely a temporary step, to be discarded when patterns of collective bargaining are more nearly

The Gallup Poll

Government Reform Held Vital

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 3.—Cutting out waste and inefficiency in the operation of the Federal Government is considered a vital need by nearly half of the voters questioned in a national poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

That is indicated in interviewing on a series of questions dealing with the report of the Herbert Toover Commission.

The poll was designed to find out whether voters look upon the need for reform as somthing vital and pressing, or something of only moderate importance, or even something that could just as well wait.

The results follow:

"How important do you think it is that something be done about reorganizing the Government in Washington—very important, fairly important, or not too important?"

Very important	44%
Fairly important	17
Not too important	15
No opinion	24

The Hoover Commission recommendations would, if put into effect, save several billion dollars over a period of years in the cost of running the Government. The commission was set up in June, 1947 by Congress.

The Hoover report came out at a time when many of the Nation's taxpayers think Government expenses could be substantially cut. In a poll reported last month on the question, "Is there anything the Federal Government spends money for now which you think should be reduced or cut out? What?," the largest single number said that there are "too many bureaus and employes, and too much waste and duplication" in the Government.

At Luncheons

2 Physicians Hit Truman Health Plan

Two physicians yesterday spoke at separate luncheons against the President's plan for national compulsory health insurance.

Dr. Frank Wilson, deputy director of the Washington office, American Medical Association, told members of the Exchange Club of Washington what he said he believed the plan would cost individuals.

He said this figures to $72 a year for each individual wage earner, just by "simple arithmetic." He said his figures were based on the President's own cost estimate.

At a luncheon of the Washington Board of Trade's public health committee, at Hotel Burlington, Dr. Herbert P. Ramsey, District physician, said medical care problems "have been inflated out of recognition by political propaganda."

Doctor Ramsey, Washington delegate to the AMA house of delegates, said that because medical care is a "salvage operation . . . no amount of medical care to the sick or injured under any system of distribution will seriously affect the sickness or injury rates."

Maryland Health Dept. 75 Years Old Friday

Baltimore, May 3 (AP).—Maryland State Health Department celebrates its seventy-fifth birthday Friday.

Dr. Robert H. Riley, present director, recalled today that the Board of Health created and appointed by the 1874 Maryland General Assembly, held its first meeting on May 6 of that year.

Maryland thus became the sixth State to have a health department. Massachusetts created the first in 1869. California, Minnesota, Michigan and Virginia came next.

"Epidemics of yellow fever, cholera, malaria and typhoid fever contributed to the growing awareness of the need for preventive measures," Dr. Riley explained.

"When Maryland took the forward-looking step, the principal purposes were prevention and control of malaria and typhoid, improvement of poor sanitary conditions and reporting deaths."

Hospitals Cooperate With Local Practitioners

Baltimore City Health Plan

FAMILY UNIT
HEALTH AND WELFARE DEPT.
HOSPITAL MEDICAL CARE CLINIC
NEIGHBORHOOD PHYSICIAN
1. The indigent family needing medical care makes application to the Baltimore City Department of Public Welfare.
2. The welfare department certifies eligibility and the health department assigns the patient to a participating hospital's medical care clinic.
3. After a complete physical examination the hospital clinic gives necessary treatment or refers the patient to a physician of his own choice.

practitioners do the home and office care.

3. If a case is beyond the experience or facilities of the local doctor, the hospital takes over the patient in its regular outpatient service. Thus the hospital receives payment for services formerly rendered free of charge to the indigent. It also has the advantage of teaching home care to its students and an opportunity to familiarize them with the family unit, whether well or ill. As the relief clients are a fairly stable group, the first class students are assigned to the families as health advisors and follow its social as well as its medical problems.

There is great need for teaching and experimentation in this kind of medical care. It is public health work in the deepest and most practical sense. The top medical staff is drawn from the hospital's various classical clinical departments. At the same time there are bilateral opportunities for the practitioners from the neighborhood to receive the guidance of the hospital faculty and to learn through their patients how to use the hospital for their clients.

Thus, practitioners who have usually had but a short period of good training are encouraged to continue their studies. Although the doctors were cautious at first, they found these aspects of the program persuasive. The good relations that were established between the doctor and the clinic through their patients was and still is the best selling factor for the health plan.

Three-Hour Sessions

TWENTY neighborhood practitioners have been appointed by the hospital for the year to work in the clinic for one or more three-hour sessions per week at a fee of $10. Five of them are Negro doctors. There is no quota. It is simply a matter of finding able men. Most of these men had no previous affiliation with the hospital. The permanent staff, in addition to Dr. Chant, the director, is an assistant clinician and internist to guide the consultations, three nurses, the supervisor, Miss Sarah Green, being experienced in public health nursing, one social worker, and a clerical staff of eight. Two laboratory technicians do blood counts and other routine tests in the clinic.

The total number of cooperating doctors is 91, of whom 68 are white and 23 Negroes, for an area that is predominantly Negro in population.

The average load of patients at the clinic is about 70 per day, as many as possible by appointment. During my visits there was a succession of unforseen emergency cases, as the clients are encouraged to come in with any kind of problem, medical, social or emotional. Usually all three factors are combined. "You can set up all the routines you like," said Dr. Chant, "but necessity always upsets them."

3000 Examinations

BY THE END OF MARCH 3000 physical examinations had been completed out of the total registration of 6000. The number of patients which the cooperating local practitioners accept varies greatly in number. The young men just starting take from 200 to 250, but a large number accept only their old patients.

The clinic is diplomatic in its handling of physicians. It takes care not to upset existing relationships between clients and their doctors. Some of the doctors were encouraged to increase their load when the first payments were received. The busiest doctors stated that the per capital payment of $7 is considered inadequate remuneration.

The abuse of the program by clients was serious at first. Then Dr. Chant sent out notices to clients who are heads of families, explaining that they are privileged to have a personal physician but that the doctor must divide his time among many people. The results of this education as to restraint in the use of free visits were good, and most of the doctors who had resented the excessive visits, became reconciled though a few dropped out.

Home Care

THE initial physical examinations at the clinic, perhaps its most significant feature, have been helped in acquainting the doctors with their patients. If they are confronted with knotty problems which they cannot handle, the hospital staff helps them out. Hospitalization is a problem in Baltimore as everywhere else. There is a shortage of 400 beds for lack of personnel.

But chiefly the medical program is directed toward home and office care by the physician and for consultation services for the physician through the specialized clinics of the hospital.

The new plan is a vast improvement on the ambulatory care given solely through the established hospital clinics, as the clients often failed to return after costly examinations. Now they are under constant observation of a private physician who keeps them under continuous treatment. It is an improvement also on the specialized clinic which examined patients only for its specialty whereas here the examination is comprehensive.

Tomorrow: Relationship of the hospital and the neighborhood.

Bill Allowing Banks to Deal In Bonds Is Hit

By S. Oliver Goodman

The National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., yesterday opposed a bill which it called an "opening wedge" for banks to get back into the securities business.

Representatives of the NASD, which has a membership of 2700 investment dealers, appeared before the House Banking and Currency Committee to protest Section 502 of H.R. 4009 (Public Housing Bill) which is an amendment to permit commercial banks to unpermit commercial banks to uncal housing authorities.

The House committee was told that this amendment represented the "opening wedge for five powerful Wall Street banks and 20 others . . . to get back into the securities business." The investment dealers declared that "the banks have enough business and are making enough profit without continually trying to move into other peoples' fields."

Another dealer told the committee that if the amendment went through, banks would then be able to act in a triple capacity "because they buy bonds for their own accounts, buy for their trust accounts and then lend to dealers to carry the bonds they buy."

Samuel K. Cunningham, also speaking for the NASD, characterized the proposed amendment as a "step backward in progressive Federal legislation" and said that the abuses of '20s were due to the fact that banks went more and more into the securities distribution business. He added that the subsequent crash resulted in Congress requiring that the banks retire from this field. "To authorize them now to deal in housing bonds would be a step backward toward their again returning to all those abuses."

BRITISH TREND: Interest rates on home loans have declined in Great Britain since the war ended, Sir Harold Bellman said yesterday at a luncheon in his honor at the Statler. Current rates to borrowers average about 4 per cent now, he declared, as contrasted with 5% to 6 per cent during the war. He pointed out, however, that bulk of the loan business is now in refinancing sales of old homes. New construction is mainly in government-subsidized low-cost housing, he added. Sir Harold is board chairman of one of the world's biggest building societies. Yesterday's fete was given by the National Savings & Loan League. Executive Manager Oscar R. Kreutz and President James J. O'Malley presided.

NEW FINANCING: April's record of new financing showed that public offerings of bonds declined last month, while new stock floatations reached the best level of any month since June, 1948. New bond issues totaled $364,113,000, compared with $389,677,000 in March and $472,423,000 in April, 1948. New stock offerings in April totaled $79,002,000 for 16 issues, compared with $29,521,000 in March and $35,129,000 in April, 1948. Bond floatations last month included $146,476,000 in State and municipal issues; $94,977,000 in public utility issues; $54,100,000 in industrial issues; $17,560,000 in railroad issues and $51,000,000 in miscellaneous classifications.

PAJAMA PROBLEM: Are American men changing their bedtime habits and sleeping in their shorts instead of pajamas? That is a question worrying the National Association of Shirt and Pajama Manufacturers of New York. The Association in its current News Bulletin reports the production of shorts last year reached 88,440,000 pair, a 23 per cent increase over the previous year. But pajama production is something else. Last year only 18,752,400 pair were produced, a fall of 20 per cent from 1947.

Business Outlook

Riddle: Which Comes First, Recession or Psychology?

By J. A. Livingston

DURING recent visits to shopping centers in various cities, I kept my eyes peeled for mass psychology. I found a sample, but it wasn't conclusive.

Sometimes I'd hear a shopper say, "That price is too high." "Ah," I'd say to myself, "That's mass psychology hard at work." Sometimes another shopper would say, "I wish I could afford that." Again I'd think, "There it is again."

Livingston

Then I'd follow a window-shopper into a store. She'd examine handbags, cosmetics, lingerie, men's shirts, children's dresses, etc. And frequently she'd buy. I'd wonder: "Is that mass psychology, too?"

Up in the durable goods department of one store, a woman said to a man, presumably her husband, "Well, let's take the clothes washer. We can't afford both." She looked regretfully at a shining dishwashing unit. I reflected: How much did M. P. mean to that transaction?

I have similar wonderings about the way businessmen buy or don't buy. Some companies, seeing demand dry up, curtail expansion. Is that mass psychology? But others—like Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., with plans on tap for six open-hearth furnaces—go ahead.

RESEARCHERS of the Bureau of Economic and Business Research of the University of Illinois are similarly doubtful about the importance of psychology in business. The April Illinois Business Review observes that people seem to analyze the present business situation by saying:

"We are in the midst of a psychological recession. There is nothing you can do about mass psychology, no matter how illogical it may be. Things are bound to go a lot lower before the turn comes." Comments the Review: "It seems surprising how ready an acceptance this kind of thinking gets—even, or perhaps most of all, by economists.

"Ordinarily, optimism and pessimism have objective origins. The businessman is confident not because he imagines prospects to be favorable but because things happening in the economy give him a clear indication that it is appropriate to move ahead. (His orders, for instance, are increasing.) And when the decline comes, it comes not because he loses confidence, but because the basic economic forces are changing. In the spring of 1947, psychology was entirely negative but could not overcome the basic strength. Again in the early months of 1948, pessimism passed without bringing on any serious recession."

IN 1929 the country was rampant with confidence. The Nation had gone through about eight years of extensive expansion—building roads, homes, public works, office buildings, local municipal projects; purchasing automobiles, refrigerators and clothing; installing machines and expanding factories. The crash didn't cause the depression. The saturation of goods caused the crash. And when in 1930 President Hoover asked utilities, railroads and industrial corporations to go ahead with their buying programs, he got hearty assents but no results. They already had bought what they wanted.

Today isn't like that. To be sure, the Federal Reserve Board index of production is down from its October-November high of 195 to about 179 or 180. Businessmen are cautious about inventories. Consumers ponder whether prices will be lower. But periodic retrenchment—hesitation—is part of the rhythm in human behavior, in consumption, and in purchasing. It's not psychological.

PEOPLE STOP buying not because they're nervous, or afraid, but because they've caught up. Postponement in some purchases is possible for a while, but not indefinitely. Furthermore, psychology has reduced rather than augmented the chance of a recession that feeds itself. The postwar recession has been so well advertised that consumers and businessmen have been deterred from overexpanding. They've not overbought to the point that a slowdown increases their overboughtness by decreasing the need for capital expansion—as in 1929. Not when so much remains to be done merely to take care of the expanded population!

All of which prompts the Illinois Business Review to declare: "If a decline based on fear alone could snowball into a recession, there would indeed be cause for concern. As things stand, the real economic forces in the present situation . . . lend assurance of continued prosperity for another year or so at least."

Pittsburgh Route Given to EAL

The Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday authorized Eastern Air Lines to serve Pittsburgh, Pa.

The action was taken through an amendment to Eastern's certificate designating Pittsburgh as an intermediate stop between Akron, Ohio, and Charleston, W. Va., on Detroit-Miami flights.

The authority stipulated that Eastern cannot use this new stop to handle local traffic between Pittsburgh, Akron, Cleveland, or Detroit; or between Pittsburgh and Charleston, W. Va.; or between Pittsburgh and Atlanta, Ga., Birmingham, Ala., Mobile, Ala., or New Orleans, La.

The addition, however, will provide direct single-carried service between Pittsburgh and Florida points.

The board said Eastern could add this stop without serious impairment to the business of Capital Air Lines, which operates in the same area.

At the same time, CAB authorized Capital and National Air Lines to interchange their equipment at Washington, D. C., the net effect being to interlace Capital's routes north of Washington and those of National south of Washington.

Senior Stock Dividend

Directors of the Seaboard Line Railroad declared a dividend of $5 a share on the 5 percent preferred stock for 1948 out of earned surplus for the year 1948. The dividend is in three parts, $2.50 payable on June 30 to stock of record June 10, $1.25 payable on September 30 to stock of record September 9 and $1.25 on December 31 to stock of record December 9.

Copper Price Again Cut As Buying Fades

By The Associated Press

The copper market, stalemated for several weeks, became more confused yesterday as one of the major producers cut prices, making three different quotations now offered the public.

Phelps Dodge Corporation cut its price to 20 cents a pound from 23½ cents, to which the other producers still clung nominally. Custom smelters, however, who normally supply about one-fourth of the copper consumed, have been offering to sell at 18½ cents.

The confused buyer was mostly standing on the sidelines, waiting. Stockholders of a leading consumer, Revere Copper and Brass, Inc., heard their chairman, C. Donald Dallas, say in Baltimore: "The sooner the inevitable post-war adjustment in the price of copper is completed, the healthier and sounder it will be for the industry." Meanwhile, he said, orders for copper products have turned sharply downward.

E. T. Stannard, president of Kennecott Copper Corp., told stockholders in New York: "Now that the copper price has been reduced by 5 cents per pound (to 18½ cents by the smelters), it would seem that buying soon would be resumed."

The president of Kennecott, a leading producer, said of the Phelps Dodge cut to 20 cents: "I don't see what good this does when the custom smelters already are quoting 18½ cents."

A small producer, Calumet & Hecla, closed its Michigan copper mines Monday, contending there was "no market for the metal."

Trade circles noted that only aluminum among the leading nonferrous metals had not cut prices. Lead and zinc preceded copper in seeking lower price levels, as the metals shifted suddenly from being in short supply to being in surplus. Aluminum still holds at 17 cents a pound, the price set last October 11. Its OPA ceiling was 15 cents.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 3 (AP).—Fair gains scored midway through today's Board of Trade session ran into profit casting at the close. The result was that all the close prices were off more than a cent from the day's high.

The unwind started in wheat and reflected some mill buying and short covering. Italy bought 400,000 hundredweight of flour overnight and traders had reports that Norway and Holland will soon be in the flour market. Another factor was the large open interest in the May contract, 16,001,000 bushels at the start of today's session. Traders also took note of unfavorable reports from Canada.

At the close wheat was to ¾ higher, corn was unchanged to ⅝ higher; oats were ½ to 1⅝ higher; rye was 2⅜ to 3¼ higher; soybeans were ½ higher to a cent lower, and lard was 12 to 22 cents a hundredweight lower.

Stannard to Retire As Kennicott Head

New York, May 3 (AP).—E. T. Stannard, president of Kennecott Copper Corp., announced today he plans to retire at the end of the year after 39 years of service with the company and its subsidiaries. He has been president for 18 years.

"It is the present expectation that Arthur D. Storke, now president of Climax Molybdenum Corp. for many years the chief operating official of certain Rhodesian copper companies, will succeed me as president and chief executive officer," Stannard said.

"It is also the present expectation that I will remain as a director and consultant to the corporation."

Tyrone Powers Safe After Flood Washes Out Camp

Casablanca, French Morocco, May 3 (U.P.).—Tyrone Power, Linda Christian and Orson Welles were safe in Marrakech today after a flash flood from the Atlas Mountains, the worst in 50 years, swept over their camp near Meknes, 125 miles northeast of here.

Everyone connected with the movie "The Black Rose," including Director Eugene Hathaway, was rescued. But it took French soldiers and natives three days to reach French starlet, Cecile Aubry, her mother and chauffeur, marooned on a rocky height near Ouarzazate, Marrakech military authorities said.

Marrakech officials said none of the cost was injured or had suffered from exposure. Some of their personal belongings and part of the film equipment were damaged.

ATTENTION!!
PET OWNERS

Now in Congress are two bills (H.R. 4349 and S-1703), which would turn over to medical schools and laboratories all unclaimed animals in the District Pound. The undersigned organizations, which are NOT anti-vivisection groups, vigorously oppose these bills because:

- They would encourage wasteful use of animals, aimless research and unnecessary and cruel experiments. Such abuses are attested to by medical journal reports and by authenticated pictures.
- Under the present law, pets at the Pound which are not promptly redeemed, are placed for adoption or mercifully destroyed. These bills would deprive pet-owners of this assurance and such pets would die on dissecting boards of medical schools by the thousands. The 32,000 dog owners of the District of Columbia whose license fees amount to $100,000 annually, are entitled to the assurance they now have under existing laws.

You have a personal interest in this matter. If these bills pass, it may be your own pet which will be delivered by the District Government to the doors of a laboratory.

One short paragraph of protest TODAY may protect your pet tomorrow. Write to Hon. J. Howard McGrath, Senate District Committee, and Hon. John L. McMillan, House District Committee.

One on the Aisle—

Maugham's Film Farewell Excels

By Richard L. Coe

THE STRIKING THING about any civilized, intelligent picture is that when anyone gets around to making one, it's precisely the sort of thing the much-maligned masses will enjoy.

Such a picture is Somerset Maugham's "Quartet," which arrives at the Playhouse this morning. It's a pleasure to urge you to see it.

To start off with, "Quartet" breaks one of the first laws of success. It's a collection of four unrelated short stories. Like one-act plays, short stories have a way of terrifying the producers. When the movies do make short stories, they're usually held together by some thread of plot.

The only thread in "Quartet" is its author. The retiring (at the age of 75) Writer Maugham appears briefly at the beginning to set up for you what you are to see, stories about characters whose birth is mingled, even in the author's mind, with persons observed and persons imagined.

And the success of "Quartet" is that Maugham, his producers and actors have so sharply imagined their characters that by the time you've met the four sets of them, you feel you know them. These are individuals, not types, observed by an understanding eye, clearly and almost affectionately.

One of the things about Maugham's admirers is the curious habit they have of describing him as ironic, satirical or bitter. This is because, in their sentimental way, they cannot bear truth, the facts as they are. Maugham's approach, to be sure, is dispassionate; he takes no sides; he merely observes. But he observes so keenly that observation is mistaken for sophistication, cynicism, bitterness. But the proof that he is no such thing lies in his ability to make you like his characters, for all their failings and petty foibles.

Such is the observation which has gone into the people of "Quartet."

The first of the stories "The Facts of Life," concerns a father's advice to a 19-year-old son on how he should conduct himself on the Riviera. By doing precisely what his father has told him not to do, the son comes off quite handsomely, proving that it is better to be lucky than to be wise.

"The Alien Corn" is the story of another young man, of ancient lineage, who determines to become a great pianist to the perplexity of his family, who feel that piano-playing is all right, but hardly a life's work. Being human, they view what happens to him in their own light, never in the youth's, which they never did, never will understand.

"The Kite" tells of a mother whose silver cord was tied to a kite, the toy on which she and her husband brought up their only son. The selfish mother's struggle with the boy's wife has a tacked-on ending which, considering that the story was written some years before the present flair for things psychological, might have happened, though one suspects that Maugham might have been more clever than the film's bow to the cliche ending.

"The Colonel's Lady" is thoroughly romantic, even to an O. Henry twist. But once again Maugham's observation of human beings pulls off quite brilliantly the story of a middle-aged wife whose Colonel Blimp husband is shocked when she pens a poetic and sexy best-seller.

The writers and actors befit Maugham's sharp-eyed approach. All the stories were adapted for the screen by R. C. Sherriff. The players for the most part are those London stage people who are near enough to their country's film studios for mutual benefit. It's most difficult to single any out, though I shall risk a few.

Mai Zetterling, previously seen in somber films, is deliciously gay as the Riviera instructress of Jack Watling, a juvenile whose youth belies his neat sense of comedy; note how he tugs at his tie in tough moments.

Francoise Rosay, who is now best described as an Anglo-French actress, is superb as the exacting pianist who decides whether or no Dirk Bogarde has what it takes for genius.

George Cole, as the determined suburbanite of "The Kite," is grand as the enthusiast whose wife suffers from his boyhood, and Hermione Baddeley is superb as his mother, making her both comic and the epitome of Momism (England, too, Mr. Wylie?).

Cecil Parker's Colonel in the final story is another masterpiece, giving the gradual breakdown of a man who had made himself into the sort which never has breakdowns. You'll also welcome Ernest Thesiger, who's not been on Broadway for years, as the astonished literary critic.

"QUARTET." J. Arthur Rank-Gainsborough-Sydney Box production released by Eagle Lion. Four short stories by W. Somerset Maugham, adapted to the screen by R. C. Sherriff. At the Playhouse.

Incredible Nats Hit 7 Homers, Whip Chisox, 14-12

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

CHICAGO, MAY 3.—Peace has broken out among the battling White Sox. Manager Jack Onslow hasn't fined anybody in the last 24 hours. There hasn't been an intra-club quarrel of any kind. They're just one great big happy family and heaven knows what disaster impends as a result of their new-found harmony.

Shot through with dissension and griped at Onslow, they were winging along nicely in second place. The great fear of Chicago's South Side fans now is that Onslow might achieve the peace and good will that reigned last year under Teddy Lyons. That's when everything was friendly, and the Sox got an early and lasting grip on eighth place.

POVICH

Hectic it's been better. The Sox have been winning games, drawing nice crowds, pleasing General Manager Frank Lane and making money for the Comiskey clan. They hope the price of peace won't be too costly.

There is some doubt now that Manager Onslow, 59-year-old freshman at the job in the major league, threatened to fine Catcher Joe Tipton $500 as was reported from St. Louis the other day. But something happened between the pair, you can bet, else Tipton wouldn't have hopped a cab to Comiskey Park early yesterday and apologized.

THE ONSLOW-TIPTON row produced a couple of other interesting, if minor, facts. Chicago reporters saw fit then to unburden themselves of the information that back in spring training, Onslow had slapped $100 fines on Chico Pieretti and Pat Seery for being heedless of the new rules. What made Onslow sore at Tipton was the thing that happened in St. Louis the other day when the White Sox took an 11-run lead into the ninth inning, and the Browns came up with eight runs. One report had it that Onslow accused Tipton of tipping off the Browns' hitters as to what was to come up. That was a pretty harsh thing to say, and Onslow denied he said it.

Actually what happened was something that frequently happens in the case of a big lead in the ninth inning. Tipton told his pitchers just to get the ball over the plate, and not to bother with any signals. It didn't figure that any club could lose an 11-run lead. But the Browns started whaling the ball, and came up with eight runs, and Tipton went back to the signs before it was too late.

But everything is sweetness and light now with the White Sox, if only temporarily. Onslow is voluble and uninhibited and there is apt to be more trouble, but he won this first skirmish that ended in Tipton's apology, and then he did the nice thing.

"I wasn't sore at Tipton personally," said Onslow, "but, everybody has to play the game to the hilt. I think we're all straightened out. I wish I had more Joe Tiptons on my club."

THE SCREWIEST PLAY of the major league season happened the other day when the Cubs were battling the Cardinals at Wrigley Field. Nelson of the Cardinals hit a ball to center field and Andy Pafko slid on his elbows to make what looked like a catch. Nelson continued to round the bases, and the umpires gave him credit for a home run, the winning run, saying Pafko had not caught the ball, but trapped it.

Pafko meanwhile was running toward the infield with what he thought was the final out. For that he was the goat, but the players could sympathize with him. If he was sure he caught the ball, then he could not make a throw to the plate because that would be an admission that he trapped it. His was a case of a guy being on a spot, unable to win no matter what his actions might be.

IT MAY BE A form of retribution for destroying the contours of what was the finest and only symmetrical playing field in the majors, but the White Sox have thus far outguessed themselves with their new and shorter fences.

They cut 26 feet of the 352-foot distance to the bleachers wall in left and right, installing wire fences the better to invite home runs off the bats of some of their heavier hitters. But to date, of the 10 synthetic homers that cleared the new fences, the score stands: White Sox 3, Opposition 7.

Page's Relief Job, Brown's Hit Win, 5-3, For Yankees

St. Louis, May 3 (AP).—Joe Page, looking more like the Page of 1947, pitched three perfect innings today and gained credit for the victory as the New York Yankees downed the St. Louis Browns, 5-3.

Page took over from starter Ed Lopat in the seventh inning with the score tied at 3-3 and gained the nod when the Yanks pounced on Joe Ostrowski for two runs in the eighth.

Ned Garver started for St. Louis but departed in favor of Ostrowski in the first inning when lead-off batter Gerry Coleman lined a ball off his pitching hand.

Pending Audit

Krug to Hold Up Awarding Of Golf Pact

Interior Secretary Julius Krug stated yesterday that no contract will be signed with the S. G. Leoffler Co., operator of the District's five public golf courses, until "any discrepancy" in the concessionaire's books are cleared up.

Krug added he had not seen the audit on Leoffler's account and had no statement to make on charges against the operator made at a special House Public Lands Subcommittee hearing Monday.

The Interior Secretary also said he is willing to enter into a "co-operative agreement" with the Recreation Board on operation of the courses, provided the Board agrees to change its policy on segregation to conform with the President's Civil Rights program.

The Interior Department operates facilities on an interracial basis, while the Recreation Board segregates most facilities.

Commenting on Interior's new offer, James E. Schwab, Recreation Board vice chairman, said he had nothing to say in the name of the board "except that the board has already stated it will operate the golf courses on a nonsegregated basis."

As to Krug's demand that the board alter its general policy on segregation, Schwab said he could only speak for himself.

"I don't think the Secretary has any right to dictate to the local board with regard to properties and functions over which it has no authority," Schwab continued.

"It's none of his business—you can say that if you like," Schwab concluded.

At the congressional hearing Monday, Schwab disclosed the concessionaire had charged a $3697 Cadillac, plus operation costs for eight cars, to golf course operating expenses.

Recreation Board Chairman Harry Wender said: "I have no comment to make other than that I'm profoundly grateful that the secretary won't take action until he himself has had an opportunity to look into the account," Wender said.

On the Interior's demand that the board change its general segregation policy, Wender repeated "I have no comment to make—he's making the same damn statement over and over again. . . . I don't think he means what he says."

Mitchell, Payne Set AAU Marks

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown Hurdler Bill Mitchell and Howard Sprinter Joe Payne smashed long-standing records in the 14th annual D. C. AAU track meet yesterday at College Park.

Mitchell turned in a sizzling 14.3 mark, fastest he's ever made in competition, in the 120-yard high hurdle event. Payne breezed to a 9.7 100-yard dash, easily turning back Teammate Booker Anderson and Maryland's Bill Alexion.

Mitchell bettered the mark of 15 flat set by Maryland's Bob Slye back in 1933. Payne eclipsed a 15-year-old 9.8 record in the 100 by Georgetown's George Bogan.

Alexion came back to win the 220 and Ty Creamer took the 2-mile to account for 10 of Maryland's 33 winning points for team honors. Howard's medley relay triumph over Georgetown, when Jim Bruce held safe Dave Smith, gave it the runner-up spot with 24. The Hoyas were third with 22.

Georgetown's mile relay team, Vin Cino, Mort Kane, Bob Spearman and Ed Sause, broke a losing streak with a 3:21.4 performance.

In the 440, Howard's Lou Russell surprised Cino and Maryland's Ed Matthews. The latter was defending the 400-meter championship he won last year.

Lieut. Bill Kash, who was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1946 and now is stationed at Navy Department headquarters, came out and turned in a nice half-mile effort, 1.58.3. He won over Georgetown Freshman Dave Boland.

In the mile, Maryland's Bob Palmer held off a determined challenge by Howard's Jim Bruce to win in 4.26.4.

name-calling by fans, in the direction of players, be not indulged in. Ball players have a right to protection from unwarranted abuse."

President Horace Stoneham of the Giants, beaming at the quick acquittal of his peppery manager, promised the situation would be rectified immediately at the Polo Grounds.

"Hereafter no fan will be permitted on the field until all players have reached the clubhouse," he said. "If we have to throw any fans out of the park, the commissioner will back us up."

Durocher, having paid what he earnestly hopes is the last of numerous trips to Chandler's office here, just sat and relaxed and drank milk after the ordeal had ended.

"Just say that I'm happy," he replied to questions. "The only statement that amounts to anything is the one the commissioner just made."

All Durocher faces now is the charge of simple assault filed against him in New York City yesterday by Boysen's lawyer. It is scheduled for hearing Monday, and Leo said he will be there. Complete with affidavits and eyewitnesses.

Stoneham added the Giants' attorney will insist on an immediate hearing. He said Chandler looked over "only 25 or 30" of the more than 100 affidavits upholding Durocher's innocence before reaching his decision today.

Chandler, in a prepared statement issued some 30 minutes after the hearing concluded, made it clear the suspension he slapped on Durocher last Friday was a "preventive rather than a punitive action."

Prominent members of the Negro and other races had advised him, he said, that there was danger of further incidents if Leo were permitted to remain in uniform. In summing up his findings, he said:

"The evidence is contradictory. Manager Durocher was involved in an incident with Fred Boysen, a Puerto Rican, and apparently came in physical contact with Boysen.

"The evidence, however, is not sufficient to warrant the belief that Durocher deliberately assaulted Boysen."

Those Wondrous Nats

I just can't resist saying "I told you so."

But I did tell you a while back that when the time came, we'd really bust loose and become mighty tough to beat.

Well, looks like the time came six games back, and we haven't stopped.

Since then, we've hit 12 home runs, played .500 ball. And today, we climbed a notch into seventh place.

Do you realize that the team which the skeptics were calling the worst-hitting outfit in league history has swatted 15 homers in 15 games. At that rate, we'll hit 154 for the season.

AND DO YOU realize that we swatted only two homers in the first 15 games last season. And that for the 154 games, we hit only 31 homers.

You can't tell me that isn't improvement.

Don't let any of those cynics say that we were hitting over a cheap chicken wire fence yesterday, either.

Even improvised, the Chicago fences in left and right are 334 feet away. All of our pokes yesterday would've been good home runs everywhere else, except possibly Griffith Stadium.

We've known since the first week of the season that we'd get the pitching and the fielding. Now that we're getting the hitting watch us go—up.

Sagittarius Skims Over 'Graw Mud to Win by Five Lengths

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks:

Calumet's Coaltown may have run his last race in the East. unless he shows some dull form which is unlikely, handicappers hereabouts are not going to allow him to go postward with 130 pounds or less. Jimmy Jones, Calumet trainer seems definitely opposed to allowing Coaltown to run with high weight. This means that only in the Chicago area, where there is a top handicap assignment of 130, will the fleet son of Bull Lea be seen in action. Other good horses have gone well above 130 pounds and have carried on in good style. If Coaltown is great, and I believe he is, he should be capable of winning over the current handicap crop up to, say 140 pounds. It is believed that Jones' stubbornness about Coaltown's assignments in an effort to have a maximum 130 pounds rule adopted all over the country. Closing day at the Graw. Get yours.—BILL.

Only 5891 See Races; Tampero 2d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Havre De Grace, Md., May 3.—Sagittarius, beaten three times when well played, rang the bell on his fourth try of the meeting today. Victory came in the Gunpowder Purse, a test of six furlongs involving a half dozen three-year-olds who will never see a Preakness or Kentucky Derby.

Sagittarius, owned by Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords of Philadelphia won by five lengths in easy fashion. Dr. G. T. Strother's Tampero, the favorite, was second and three and a half lengths in advance of E. A. Stone's Rare Mineral.

With Garden State Park opening, the Graw drew only 5891 customers today. Those in the crowd who backed Sagittarius collected an $8.60 win mutuel. Despite a track that looked muddy, the winner was clocked in a good 1:11 4/5.

The program brought a thrilling deadheat. In the fourth race, R. R. McClarin's Abbottstown, ridden by Carson Kirk, and Mrs. M. Kratz' Bo Mowlee, piloted by Bobby Mitchell, came into the line as a team and the camera could not separate them. Abbottstown paid $10.60 to win and Bo Mowlee $4.80 in the split win payoff.

Anacostia Blanked By Trainers

The slugging of Billy Werber, jr., and the four-hit pitching of Jack Pope gave McKinley Tech an 11-0 shutout victory over Anacostia yesterday at Tech, and kept the Trainers in a tie with Wilson for first place in the Interhigh League.

Werber, son of a former major league third baseman, hammered out his third league home run and a pair of triples to knock in three runs and score two. Pope's win was his third. Tech has won all four of its starts.

Griffs Whip Chisox, 14-12

today and emerged with credit for the victory. He put the Sox out in order in their tenth.

Four of the Nats' homers were somewhat synthetic. At least they didn't go into the stands, but merely cleared the wire fence installed by the White Sox to invite homers off their own bats.

Totted up, the Nats got 10 of their 14 runs from homers alone.

Harry Gumpert was the starting pitcher for the White Sox, the first of their five. He didn't last out the first inning. The Nats started off with four runs in the first, and then went to bat with somewhat diminishing returns, getting three in the second, two in the third and one in the fourth before they were shut out.

Scarborough was having a bad time of it despite his generous lead. He was socked for four runs in the third that cut his advantage to 9-5, and in the sixth Joe Tipton homered with one on to shear Scarborough's lead to 10-7.

When Scarborough walked the first man in the eighth, Candini relieved him. The Sox belted Candini for four runs with the help of Luke Appling's two-run triple to center, and now in front they turned a 11-10 lead over to Bob Kuzava.

He lost it on Christman's two-run homer in the ninth, but Dick Welteroth walked Dave Philley to put the tying run on base in the botton half of the inning. After Michaels' sacrifice, Calvert was called in and Philley was run down on Tipton's grounder to Dente. But Tipton reached second, and scored on Souchock's pinch-hit double to tie it up.

Tie it up, that is, until the Nats unloaded their sixth and seventh homers on this famous day.

Pitcher Ed Klieman was on the rubbing table before today's game when he learned the Yankees had bought him at the $10,000 waiver price . . . The Nats parted with Klieman with no great sense of loss . . . He had pitched exactly one inning since being acquired from Cleveland in the Vernon-Wynn deal, had given up two runs, and was suffering from a wrenched knee . . . The Nats are still one man above the 25-player limit they must meet by May 20 . . . Herman Reich (pronunced Rich, he says) joined the Nats today from Cleveland. Bought as a first baseman-outfielder utility man, Reich confessed he hadn't played first base in the last two years . . . Buddy Lewis and Eddie Yost warmed the Nats' bench today, suffering from, respectively, a sniffling cold and a lame back . . . the Sam Dente today replaced Gil Coan as the Nats' leading hitter.

Alexandria Athlete Dies After Crash

William E. Sellers, jr., 22, athlete, Alexandria, died yesterday in Alexandria Hospital from injuries suffered in a traffic accident Sunday on Route No. 3, about 20 miles east of Fredericksburg, Va.

Sellers

Sellers was returning from Colonial Beach when the car in which he was riding with two friends blew out a tire and overturned.

His companions were not seriously hurt, but Sellers' neck was broken. Treated at Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg, he later was moved to Alexandria Hospital, where he died early yesterday.

Sellers, who lived with his parents at 106 E. Del Ray ave., had boxed for St. Mary's Boys Club in Alexandria and played basketball and football for St. Paul's Boys Club and American Legion Post No. 24 there. Last year, as a middleweight boxer, he reached the quarter-finals of Washington's Golden Gloves tournament.

He served with the United States Marine Corps as a corporal during the war, and returned to finish high school in Alexandria after his discharge. At the time of his death he was employed by an Alexandria dry cleaning firm.

He is survived by his parents and two sisters, Miss Shirley Sellers, who lives with her parents and Mrs. Peggy Lockhart, 315 E. Del Ray ave., Alexandria.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 9 a. m. at the Del Ray Baptist Church with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

From Australia

Archeologists Unpack New Treasures

Sample treasures of a 1948 expedition to Australia's primitive Arnhem Land region—peopled by aborigines with a Stone Age culture—were unpacked yesterday at the National Museum by three participating Washington scientists.

Hafted stone axes and bark paintings were among the specimens uncovered in yesterday's brief inspection by Dr. Frank M. Setzler, head curator of the Smithsonian's anthropology department; Dr. David Johnson, mammalogist; and Herbert G. Deignan, ornithologist.

Further investigation of the 100 wooden crates will have to await fumigation by the museum, according to Dr. Setzler. Packed away in them, he says, are 10,000 dead fish, 400 birds, and 800 marsupials (Australian version of our mammals)—to mention just a few items.

Hammer-head shark, carved in bark, was presented by natives to Dr. Setzler

Also stored in the crates are a half dozen skeletons of 16th and 17th century Malay fishermen—first foreigners who came in contact with the primitive Australian natives.

Fingerprints, facial masks, and hair samples given by the present aborigines are included too. There's nothing savage about the natives, Dr. Setzler says, though their culture is still at the pre-agricultural hunting and fishing stage.

Isolated on the vast Arnhem Land reserve in north central Australia, and sheltered from nearly all contact with Western civilization, the aborigine youngsters surprised the expedition by playing at cowboys and Indians, he said.

This remarkable fact was explained, Dr. Setzler went on, when the group learned American movies had been shown at World War II Air Force bases in the area.

The one-year expedition to the little-known region was sponsored jointly by the Smithsonian Institution, the National Geographic Society, and the Australian Commonwealth. It included 10 Australian scientists and five Americans.

The other two United States representatives, both Washingtonians, were Dr. Herbert Miller, ichthyologist, and Howell Walker, National Geographic Society, staff photographer.

Merrick Camp Drive Started

A $500 check from the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, last night sparked the beginning of a $30,000 drive for funds to operate the 1949 Merrick Boys Summer Camp at Nanjemoy, Md.

The announcement of the gift was made at a dinner attended by 100 directors at the camp and more than 30 pastors of the Washington parishes at the Columbia Country Club, Chevy Chase, Md.

Raymond A. DuFour, 1949 campaign committee chairman, said the camp hopes to duplicate last year's record of giving more than 500 underprivileged Washington youngsters a two-week vacation at the Potomac camp.

The camp will open July 5, and will hold four two-week sessions during the season. Charles P. Maloney will be the 1949 administrator.

Following last night's dinner, the 100 directors of the camp will begin a campaign to raise the balance of the $30,000.

Guests at the dinner, introduced by Camp President Thomas A. Flynn, included Msgr. James Cowhig, chancellor of the Washington diocese and the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, rector at Catholic University.

Bryant Quits Post On Hospital Unit For Albany Job

Robert P. Bryant, executive secretary of the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area, has resigned to become manager of the University Club in Albany, N. Y., it was disclosed yesterday.

Though no official announcement was made, it was understood that John D. Martin, newly appointed assistant administrator at Columbia Hospital, has been offered the post on the Hospital Council.

G.W.U. May Queen Election Today

The 1949 May Queen at George Washington University will be chosen from 14 students nominated by campus organizations when the students vote today.

The student selected will reign over May Day ceremonies to be held at 8:15 p. m. Friday, in Lisner Auditorium, 21st and H sts. nw. William Warner, president of the student council, will crown the queen, and other candidates will serve as her court.

Following the ceremony, the May Day carnival will be held in the university gymnasium.

Fordham Priest Opposes Limiting U.S. Education Aid

If Federal aid to education is restricted to public institutions, it may eventually destroy freedom of education, the Rev. Lawrence J. McGinley, S.J., president of Fordham University, warned here last night.

Speaking before the Fordham Club of Washington, at its annual dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, Father McGinley attacked what he termed the "powerful lobby" which, he said, seeks to exclude Federal aid from all but public schools.

He predicted such exclusion would "seriously damage" educational freedom and "entrench in American education, those organizations which are trying to implant their own brand of 'nonsectarian ethical culture' as the official religion of the public school."

"It is of the highest importance to the maintenance of our great American traditions that both systems of education, public and independent, continue to flourish side by side," he declared. "The maintenance of a variety, diversity and independence of schooling is one of the most powerful safeguards the world has against the totalitarian state, and the best guarantee that our whole educational system will stay young and dynamic.

"If parents have the right to send their children to any adequate school, public or independent," Father McGinley said, "then obviously all these schools must be allowed to exist without unfair discrimination or undue favoritism."

'Screening' Idea To Be Explained By Dr. Ruhland

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, will hold a meeting for Negro clergymen and the press Thursday to explain his proposal for screening low income persons interested in coming to Washington.

Dr. Ruhland said the session will be held in his office at the Municipal Center at 10 a. m. to gibe "an understanding of what I suggested when I advocated screening" of Negroes at a meeting of the District Commissioners last week.

Agriculture May Shut County Committees For Lack of Funds

The thousands of Agriculture county committee offices—one in each county—will be out of funds this weekend unless Congress approves the first deficiency bill in the meantime.

The county committees are under the Production and Marketing Administration, which has 14 millions tied up in the deadlocked bill. PMA officials yesterday were drafting a memo to employes in the many offices to urge them to continue on their jobs if Congress continues to dally on the important money bill.

Agriculture's Commodity Credit is "broke" and it won't be able to meet its next payday. Commerce has suspended expansion on its big business census, and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing is fast running out of money. In all, a score of agencies and activities have money tied up in the deficiency bill which has been before Congress for more than three months. The "worst" Eightieth Congress was never that bad.

VA: Its branch and regional offices will be told this weekend how many employes each of them must fire before June 30. The total is expected to be in excess of 10,000. In addition, about 8000 more people must be discharged unless the Senate restores budget cuts made by the House.

An allotment board has been set up in headquarters of the Veterans Administration here to fix personnel ceilings for the various offices. Allotment letters now going out take in account the reduction of 10,000 jobs recommended by the President in his January budget message.

MOVING: Hundreds of Army civilians will be moved from the Pentagon to Navy buildings on this side of the Potomac. As top Navy officials and their staffs are moved into the Pentagon, Army employes will be moved out and into their offices.

APPOINTMENT: Stanley Andrews is reported to be in line to be appointed chief of the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations. He's a former Agriculture official and Arkansas newspaper publisher who has a distinguished record in both the hot and cold wars.

Andrews is given much of the credit for making the Berlin airlift a success. He's General Clay's deputy in charge of feeding Berlin and his plans are helping to win the cold war. In the war he had charge of feeding Italy and several other European countries.

NOTES: Senator Humphrey (R., Minn.) will reveal his views on personnel administration at a dinner meeting tomorrow night in the Agriculture cafeteria of the Society for Personnel Administration . . . CIO's right-wing Government Workers Union will meet tonight at 8 at 1114 O st. nw. All Federal workers are invited . . . The President had to issue an official order to extend the job rights of Gerald C. Gross with Federal Communications. Gross is detailed with the International Telecommunications Union . . . Incidentally, FCC is issuing a readable handbook to its employes.

ELEANORE KERBER, an OHE attorney, is credited by her coworkers with originating the idea of having a bank lend Office of Housing Expediter employes money to cover their paychacks . . . At Public Buildings, Leo J. Bittner and Robert O. Evans have been cited by Federal Works Administrator Fleming as two officials who have come up through the career service. They aren't retiring, as was reported here Sunday . . . Henry C. Iler has explained the operations of his Employes Compensations Appeals Board to members of the Federal Personnel Counsel. Many people in Government don't realize that injury and death cases can be appealed to the board which has worked well under Iler's leadership.

BILLS: The House has approved the bill to allow full-time Federal workers to take part-time jobs on the 1950 general census . . . The Long Subcommittee of the Senate Civil Service Committee has set hearings for Monday on the several pay raise bills . . . The Administration's Classification Act is scheduled to be sent to Congress today. It would give the average classified employes an increase of $50 a year. The Senate committee has tabled a bill supported by the Civil Service Commission to allow supervisors to suspend employes up to 30 days for violation of rules. The proposal was attacked by employe unions . . . Chairman Tydings of the Senate Armed Forces Committee has in a bill to allow the Army to hire women doctors.

Laborer Shoots Wife Twice, Then Kills Self

A jealousy-crazed 31-year-old laborer critically wounded his common-law wife last night then killed himself by firing two bullets in his head and chest.

According to police, Willie Knuckles, a brickyard worker and car washer who lives at 210 K st. ne., climaxed a long quarrel with his wife, Audrey Maxwell, 24, by shooting her in the left temple and upper chest. He then turned the gun on himself.

The woman's five-year-old son, Calvin, was in the bedroom during the shooting but was not harmed.

Police said Knuckles left a note saying that he was jealous of his wife and that she had threatened to leave him. The shooting occurred at about 11 p .m.

Doctors at Casualty Hospital, where the woman was taken, said she was in critical condition after being shot with a weapon which police said was a Belgian automatic.

Neighbors in the downstairs apartment of the K st. house told police they saw the couple come in about 8 p. m. laughing and talking. A short while later they began to argue and the woman threatened to leave him, police were told.

Knuckles then said he would shoot her rather than let her leave. The son said his mother cried "Don't shoot me," as Knuckles fired.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide for Knuckles and said the shooting of his wife was an attempted murder.

$3500 Theft Series Laid To 'Drifter'

A series of housebreakings which recently plagued a fashionable Northwest Washington neighborhood were attributed by police yesterday to a 44-year-old "drifter," now in prison in Georgia.

The man, police said, is Kenneth Hundred, no fixed address, who has admitted breaking into 14 homes on Connecticut ave., Woodley rd. and Tilden st. over a three-week period ending early in April. His loot, consisting mainly of jewelry, silverware and money, totaled more than $3500.

Police said Hundred admitted the thefts at a prison camp near Macon, Ga., where he was sent last week following his arrest on a fugitive charge. He is scheduled to serve out the remainder of a 10-year robbery term, which was interrupted when he escaped from the Georgia State Penitentiary several months ago, police said.

Hundred's procedure, police said, was to observe apartments occupied by not more than one person. When the occupant left the building he would ring the apartment doorbell to make certain it was unoccupied before jimmying the door.

On one occasion, police thought they had him trapped in one of the apartment buildings when he was spotted in the lobby by a tipster, who notified detectives. A three-hour search of the 205-apartment building, however, bore no fruit.

Hundred was questioned in Georgia by Detective Sergt. G. L. Norris, who flew to the prison camp last Friday after Georgia authorities notified District police he had been apprehended.

Convict Turns About Face on Plea of Guilty

John B. Greenleaf, 37, who last week pleaded guilty to a manslaughter charge and avoided trial for first degree murder, yesterday denied on the witness stand that he had anything to do with the robbery death of John Gant, 55, 6105 Eads st. ne.

The turnabout was made by Greenleaf during District Court trial of Leroy L. Smith, 25, of Landover, Md.

Greenleaf, who lived in Fairmont Heights, Md., was called to testify for Smith, on trial for first-degree murder in Gant's death last September. Gant was robbed of $10 and beaten to death with a brick in the 6200 block of Dix st. se.

Greenleaf denied that he had seen Smith the night of the slaying when questioned on the witness stand.

On cross-examination, he admitted that a signature on a confession appeared to be his but said he did not place it there. Asked whether he had pleaded guilty to manslaughter, Greenleaf mumbled:

"The lawyer told me what to do."

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut then asked Greenleaf, "You mean you pleaded guilty to manslaughter and face a long jail sentence because a lawyer told you to?"

"I still don't know anything about this robbery and murder," Greenleaf replied.

Greenleaf, now awaiting sentence, was represented at the time of plea by Attorney H. Eugene Bryan. The lawyer told a reporter yesterday that the decision to plead guilty was entirely the client's who. if convicted on the first-degree murder indictment, would face the electric chair.

Drunk Charge Dropped Against Roanoke Pilot

A charge of operating an airplane while under the influence of alcohol lodged against a Roanoke man last February after he crash-landed his light plane near Fairfax Circle (Va.) has been nolle prossed.

Lytton Gibson, assistant Commonwealth's attorney of Fairfax County, said he asked that charges against Julian V. Davidson, 22, be dropped because (1) it would be difficult to prove that a man who made a forced landing without hurting either of the two occupants was under the influence of alcohol and (2) Civil Aeronautics board officials are making their own investigation of the case.

Jury Acquits Woman, 19, in Lover's Death

Mrs. Redden Found Innocent in Slaying Of Ellsworth Taylor

A Prince Georges County jury yesterday acquitted Mrs. Dorothy Redden, 19, of 7019 F st., Carmody Hills, Md., in the knife slaying of her 33-year-old lover.

The jury deliberated less than two hours before returning a verdict of innocent in the dea h of Ellsworth E. Turner on April 3 at about 2:20 a. m.

In the trial Mrs. Redden testified she and Turner had gone to several taverns that evening, and that on their return she tried to stop him from taking another drink.

She said he raised his fist to hit her. She stabbed him in the chest with a 7-inch butcher knife and later inflicted a superficial stab wound in her left breast.

Housing Code Indorsed by Citizens Unit

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution proposing a sanitary and housing code, which would hold landlord and tenant jointly responsible, to improve Washington slum conditions.

Such a program was reported to have been under consideration by the urban development committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

The association meeting in the Columbia Heights Christian Church hall, 1435 Fark rd. nw., also voted opposition to compulsory health plans after hearing objections voiced by Dr. James A. Gannon, of the District Board of Education.

Metropolis View Backs School Financing Plan

The Metropolis View Citizens Association last night voted support of School Supt. Hobart M. Corning's proposal that the Government help finance the District's school building program.

Meeting at the Crosby Noyes School, the citizens' group adopted a resolution in which it urged the Government to advance the District an interest-free loan "in a sum sufficient to cover the cost of school construction needed at present."

The group also indorsed the Board of Trade's proposed sanitation and housing code bill, which was submitted to the Commissioners yesterday.

Seven Oaks Approves County Tax Increase

The Seven Oaks Manor (Md.) Citizens Association has voted in favor of a 10 cent-per-$100 increase in the Montgomery County tax rate, provided the added funds are to be used solely for school construction.

Elected president of the group, at its regular meeting Monday night, was John Lemp, 301 Ellsworth dr., Silver Spring. Other officers are Harold Hammond, vice president; Ferdinand J. Roy, treasurer, and Mrs. Roy Jacobson, secretary.

Bennett Is Reelected Takoma League Head

Luke J. Bennett has been elected president of the Takoma Park (M.) Community League for the fourth successive year. Other officers are Vincent P. Russo, vice president; Weaver Boyle, treasurer, and Mrs. Irene Brungart, recording secretary, all reelected, and Mrs. Eunice M. Railey, corresponding secretary.

Elected as delegates to the Montgomery County Civic Federation were Bennett, Walter Pritchard and Roy C. Potts.

Gettysburg, Pa., May 3 (Spl.).—A Navy enlisted man was killed and two other sailors were injured near here tonight when their car collided with a truck on Carlisle Highway.

State police said all three were from Anacostia Naval Base, at Washington, D. C.

The dead man was identified tentatively as Frank N. Dixon, jr., of Blairsville, Pa. Injured were William B. Rennie, Long Island, N. Y., and John Batman, Los Gatos, Calif.

D. C. Heads To Ask Fund For Slum Aid

West Told to Go Before House Unit To Seek Necessary Eligibility Rights

The Commissioners yesterday agreed to ask Congress to make the fundless District Redevelopment Land Agency eligible for slum clearance money under the pending national housing bill.

If Congress approves this request and the House accepts the Senate-passed Sparkman amendment, Washington, like all other cities, may avail itself of outright Federal grants and loans for both public housing and slum clearance here.

The city heads have instructed Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, it was learned last night, to go before the House Banking Committee to seek an amendment to the pending national measure giving the local and land agency power to accept Federal funds provided by the measure.

Seek Appropriation

Meanwhile, the Commissioners are pressing for an immediate appropriation to the land agency under its own 20-million-dollar authorization created by the District slum clearance act of 1946.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young emphasized that efforts to permit the land agency to draw from the national bill funds would not be urged if such action would preclude or hinder obtaining a separate immediate appropriation under the city's own three-year-old act.

"We know our own act and have most of the bugs worked out, and therefore believe we can still make faster progress under our separate land agency setup than under the new bill, assuming that it becomes law," said General Young.

Housing Asked

In other slum clearance developments locally, four civic organizations yesterday filed a joint statement with the House Banking Committee, declaring that the solution to the city's blighted areas does not "lie solely in the demolition of the slum area; rather, the provision of adequate public housing for the low income groups is primarily needed."

The statement was presented by the District Federation of Civic Associations, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the International Ministers' Alliance of Washington and the Washington Urban League.

The Board of Trade yesterday laid before the Commissioners its expected proposal for a new District Sanitary and Housing Code as an immediate means to "eliminate most of the unfavorable" slum conditions "without major public expense."

Dr. Sweeney Recovering In Bethesda

Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney, retiring superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, is recovering from a heart attack at the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda.

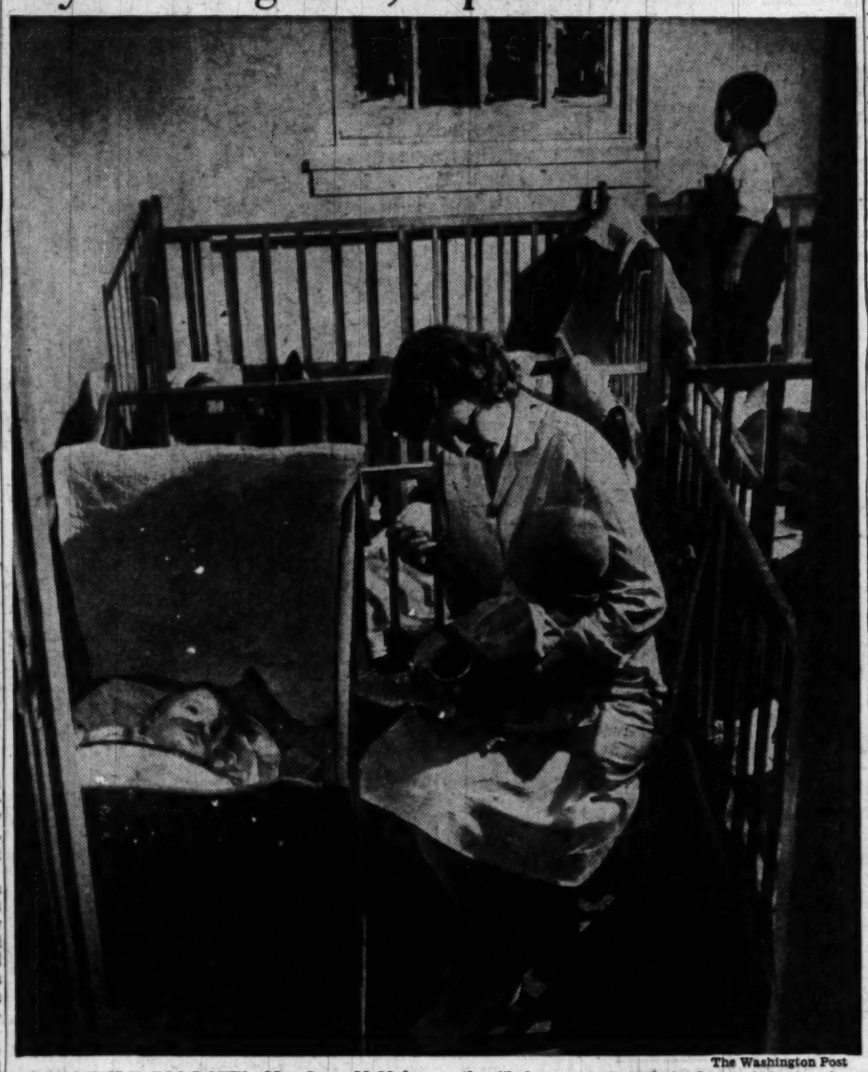
Dr. Sweeney

Dr. Sweeney suffered a heart attack at his home last Wednesday shortly after submitting his resignation effective May 15. The administrator, who is now in an oxygen tent, is reported improving by Mrs. Sweeney, his wife. She said he had never had heart trouble before.

Yesterday Dr. George C. Ruhland, Health Officer, praised Dr. Sweeney for the "public service" he had rendered, in a letter accepting his resignation. Dr. Ruhland said the task was often a "thankless job" in which "the criticism often outweighed the commendation."

At the same time, Dr. Ruhland announced he had received a letter from Dr. P. S. Rossiter, Gallinger chief of staff, resigning as of May 15. He said Dr. Rossiter planned to move to the West Coast.

D. C. Government Declines to Accept Any More Neglected, Dependent Children



The Washington Post

'TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE'—Mrs. Joyce McMullen, a nurse at the Industrial Home School Annex, sits amid four cribs, crowded into one of the "baby rooms," and feeds an infant. An older child stands in a crib, gazes out window

Public Welfare Director John W. Tramburg yesterday announced that the District government cannot care for any more dependent and neglected children.

He explained that there is not enough room at the Industrial Home School Annex to house any more children, not enough money in the budget to clothe and feed them and that it is "humanly impossible" for the annex staff to care for more children than they now have.

The annex, built to care for 90 children, now has a population of 145. Tramburg announced that intake will be cut off entirely until the number of children in the annex is reduced to 100.

Meanwhile, Tramburg will bring the whole matter before the Board of Public Welfare at its meeting May 27. He will ask the board to promulgate a policy to cover the situation permanently.

For neglected and dependent children who apply to the Department of Public Welfare for aid, Tramburg had only one answer:

"We are asking the private agencies to help us in providing emergency homes. We are checking and double-checking for any possible relatives of dependent children before we recommend them for such homes. We are trying to find suitable family connections for the children now in our care at the annex."

Tramburg emphasized that his action, announced yesterday, was not designed "to get Congressional sympathy."

"The action was taken to save what we've got. We have a good program at the Annex, a good staff to administer it. Why should we jeopardize these things, and create nothing but a public scandal, by continuing the present situation?" he asked.

Tramburg said that he hoped that during May, the population at the Annex will level off to the point where intake may be resumed. But he added that he was afraid family breakup is the largest single factor contributing to the sharp increase in number of children being placed in care of the board.

He said the increase in children at the Annex had been going on since last November, and showed no signs of declining.

At the Industrial Home Annex yesterday, Miss Winifred G. Thompson, assistant superintendent in charge, showed reporters a nursery in which there were five cribs, where three should be the maximum number. Similar crowded conditions exist in the dormitories.

She said the population increase had forced Annex officials to abandon the isolation ward, with the result that the children are sometimes exposed to communicable diseases, or to such conditions as lice.

She said that the staff, working in every available moment, needs most of Friday and Saturday each week to wash the heads of the resident children.

Tramburg said that there is no possibility of relieving the problem by putting the children in foster homes. He pointed out that the foster home situation is "at saturation point."

The public welfare director has notified police and juvenile bureau officials of his action.

District Wins New Traffic Safety Award

The American Automobile Association named Washington a grand award winner for "making the most effective efforts to cut down pedestrian accidents" during 1948.

Last month, Washington received the top award from the National Safety Council for advancement of traffic safety.

In the AAA's tenth annual pedestrian protection contest, Washington won first place among cities of 500,000 or more population and the grand award for all cities with more than 50,000 population.

The AAA citation said that, although Washington had only a slight reduction in pedestrian deaths, it won the grand award because of its "well-balanced" program designed to protect the person afoot.

The city's accident reporting methods were mentioned in particular.

Last year 52 pedestrians were killed in the City and 2178 injured; in 1947, 49 were killed, 2080 injured.

A Stone's Throw

Dog Defense Fails, Man Fined $15

Because his dog walked across freshly smoothed cement, Martin E. Fox, 18, of 1900 N. Stafford st., Arlington, was $15 poorer yesterday.

He was relieved of that sum in Arlington County Court after being convicted of disorderly conduct and one count of assault against Bennie Marshall, a mason for the Virginia Paving Co.

Police said it all began Monday when Fox's dog walked across the cement Marshall was smoothing on a construction job in the 1700 block of Kirkwood rd., Arlington.

Irate, Marshall threw some stones at the dog. Equally irate, dog lover Fox hurled some right back—at Marshall, police said.

When police were summoned, they picked up Fox a short distance from the scene. He refused to identify himself, police testified, swore at them, using "four-letter words," and agreed to enter the scout car only when his dog was allowed to come along, too.

Ft. Belvoir Private Falls to His Death At Forest Glen

Private Henry G. Gizzelle, 26, stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., fell to his death last night from the third floor of Forest Glen Hospital, the convalescent annex of Walter Reed Hospital.

He was admitted to Walter Reed as an eye patient on January 24, hospital officials said. He was later transferred to Forest Glen.

At Forest Glen, he was assigned to a second floor ward. Mrs. Lizzie C. Lowery, a maid told police she saw him on the third floor, the women's floor. She said she told him he was in the wrong ward and that he then went to a railing and plunged about 50 feet to a floor below.

Mrs. Lowery said a pillow blocked her view and that she was not certain whether he jumped or slipped.

Montgomery County police and Coroner Frank J. Broschart began an investigation.

Judge Bentley Retirement on Salary Urged

J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), Senate District Committee chairman, said yesterday he favors providing for Judge Fay L. Bentley's retirement with pay in any Juvenile Court judgeship bill.

Judge Bentley, a voluntary patient in St. Elizabeths Hospital, is eligible to continue receiving $10,000 annual salary until her present term ends in April, 1952, according to District auditing officials. They said she also is eligible to retire.

Senator McGrath said he feels the Juvenile Court here needs two full-time judges. He voiced this belief after the Senate District Committee heard witnesses testify in a morning hearing on bills to give the court an additional judge.

Miss Bentley's place is now being taken by Judge Nadine L. Gallagher, on assignment from Municipal Court.

District Bar Association witnesses urged committee approval of the bill they had drafted to give the court two regular judges. Among those who testified for the measure were Lowry N. Coe, president of the District Bar Association, Earl H. Davis, chairman of the bar subcommittee which drafted the bill, and Mrs. Burnita S. Matthews, Washington attorney.

Allen Cozier, Justice Department official, said that while the agency does not oppose the bar association bill, it has recommended a different plan, contained in a bill by Sen. Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) for the emergency appointment of an additional Juvenile Court judge for a six year term. Miss Bentley's position would be abolished at the end of her term, or when she leaves.

The bar bill also was indorsed by Mrs. Harold Sinton of the advisory committee for Juvenile Court, although she opposed some requirements now in the bill.

A similar view was presented by Melvin A. Glasser, of the District Chapter, American Association of Social Workers.

82d 'Alumni' to Meet

Plans for the formation of a Washington chapter of the 82nd Airborne Division Association will be discussed at a meeting of 82d Division "alumni" at 8 o'clock tonight in American Legion Hall, 2437 15th st. nw.

265-Pounder Loses Footrace To Policemen in Numbers Raid

A 265-pound man who made the mistake of jumping out of a window and trying to outdistance some slimmer-hipped policemen was captured after a short chase yesterday in a numbers raid. Another man who took the window route jumped straight into the arms of a policeman.

Charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips were: Rachel E. Hawkins, 48, of 1244 Wylie st. ne.; Harrison B. Wills, 46, of 618 12th st. ne.; Herron Lee Sherrill, 35, of 806 Alabama ave. se., and Mrs. Rena L. Green, 27, of 816 13th st. ne. They were released on $1500 bond each for a United States Commissioner's hearing today.

The four were arrested in a raid yesterday afternoon by vice squad officers and two United States marshals on the Wylie street address. Police reported they confiscated nealy $600 in cash and a large quantity of numbers slips and rundown sheets.

The $600 included marked money with which undercover men had made plays at the establishment, according to Lieut. Roy Blick, vice squad chief. The place had been under surveillance for nine days, he said.

Sherrill, described by police as a 265-pound, 6-foot "pickup man," leaped from a window as police converged on the place from front and rear doors, ran a block and a half before being captured, according to Blick. Wills, the other man, didn't get that far but landed in the arms of a policeman.

Blick described the Wylie st. address as "a good-sized turn-in place."

Gas Concern Plans to Ask For Increase In Rate Here

Intention Revealed At Senate Hearing; No Boost Since '42, Firm Official Says

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The Washington Gas Light Co. expects "in the very near future" to seek an increase in the rates for gas service in the District.

Word of the forthcoming request was given by the company's president, E. J. Boothby, to the Senate District Committee during an executive hearing on a bill to permit revising the firm's 101-year-old congressional charter.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) asked the company officials if they planned to seek an increase in gas rates here.

"We may be forced in the very near future to raise the question of increased gas rates in the District," said Boothby. Later, he told reporters he did not know how much of an increase would be sought, but the request would probably be made to the District Public Utilities Commission within the next 12 months. The PUC would fix the amount of any increase.

Boothby said that between 1935 and 1942 there were five gas rate reductions, and that a slight increase was granted in 1942. The rates have been unchanged since 1942, he said.

Witnesses from Arlington County testified against features of the charter revision bill, while District PUC and company officials urged its approval. Committee Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) said the bill would be discussed in a later meeting of the committee.

The bill was once approved by the committee, but the Arlington protests led Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) to block Senate action, and McGrath steered the bill back to the committee.

The Arlington officials opposed that section of the bill empowering the Washington Gas Light Co. to merge with any of its four subsidiaries, including the Rosslyn Gas Co., which sells gas to consumers in the northern Virginia area near Washington.

Albert A. Carretta, attorney representing the Arlington Public Utilities Commission, said the Arlington County Board of Commissioners has asked the Federal Power Commission to investigate the wholesale fates charged to the Rosslyn subsidiary.

Carretta protested that the rates for gas in Arlington are 25 to 33 per cent higher than those in Washington.

Boothby said the bill's provisions would in no way affect the determination of rates. He said the company feels its charges to the Rosslyn firm are fair and that while there is no present plan for a merger with the Rosslyn firm, the parent company wants the authority to merge when economic conditions warrant.

Probe Ordered Of Fort Belvoir Gas Tank Blast

Fort Belvoir officials yesterday ordered an inquiry into the explosion of a 420,000-gallon gasoline tank, apparently the casualty of a fierce electrical storm which swept the Washington area late Monday.

Spokesmen at the Virginia Army post said a board of inquiry would be convened to determine officially the cause of the explosion, which was followed by fire. Indications were that the gas tank was ripped by lightning.

The tank, situated on a hilltop adjacent to Eebee Field, contained 300,000 gallons of high octane airplane gas. Loss of the gasoline was considered negligible, since it was contaminated, but post officials said damage caused by the blast may exceed $50,000.

Store Looted Again By Habitual Bandit

For the second time in 24 hours and the third time in a month, High's Ice Cream Store, 1310 11th st. nw., was robbed yesterday.

Police believe one man may have committed all three robberies.

Mrs. Evelyn Robinson, 29, of 1821 Kalorama rd. nw., a clerk, told police a man entered the store at 1:10 p. m., his hand held in his pocket, and told her:

"Give me everything you've got in the cash drawer, and I mean everything."

This amounted to between $5 and $10, which the bandit scooped up, then walked from the store before breaking into a run.

The robberies have been similar down to the haul—$10 each time. The man has been described in all instances as a Negro, about 25, 5 feet 8 inches tall.

HOB Theft Reported

Miss Margaret O'Neill, 25, secretary to her father, Representative Harry P. O'Neill (D., Pa.), reported the theft yesterday of a billfold containing between $75 and $100 from the Congressman's office in the old House Office Building. She suspected a man she saw running from the office, after she had stepped out for a few minutes.

Bar Group To Demand Red Oaths

Applicants to the Federal Bar Association hereafter will have to disavow Communist affiliations.

The action to limit future membership to non-Communists was brought up as the first order of business by James E. Palmer, special assistant to the Attorney General, after he was elected president of the group at its annual meeting.

Palmer said the resolution was adopted with hardly any opposition after some discussion as to its "wholesomeness."

It will require all prospective members to sign the following statement:

"I certify that I am not a member of the Communist Party, U.S.A., or of any organization that advocates overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence."

The association has about 4500 members, 1000 of them in Washington, and is open to lawyers working in the Government, in the armed forces or as legislators or jurists.

Palmer is currently working on Communist prosecutions in Philadelphia, San Francisco and New Orleans.

Mother Anne Verstraeten

Requiem mass was said yesterday in the chapel of the Convent of the Perpetual Adoration for Mother Anne Verstraeten, organist and librarian at the convent, who died early Sunday after an illness of several months. Burial was in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The mass was conducted by the Rev. Father Edmond Fontaine, pastor of St. Paul's Church, and was sung by the choir of Holy Cross College.

Mother Anne Verstraeten, 68, was born in Belgium and educated by the Dominican Sisters of Lubeck, near Brussels. She joined the Order of the Perpetual Adoration in 1903, and served in convents in Belgium for 22 years before coming to Washington in 1925.

She had been principal organist at the convent since coming to this country.

Mother Anne Verstraeten is survived by two brothers, the Rev. Ferdinand Verstraeten and Edward Verstraeten, an attorney, both of Brussels.

High Requiem Is Offered for Mrs. Quezon

Requiem high mass was celebrated yesterday at St. Matthew's Cathedral for Mrs. Aurora Quezon, widow of the first President of the Philippines; her daughter, Maria Aurora, and son-in-law, Felipe Buencamino 3d.

The three were slain by bandits in the northeastern section of Luzon Thursday.

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, presided at the service and the Rev. Pacifico A. Ortiz, S. J., wartime chaplain to the Quezon family, delivered the eulogy.

"There is utter shame all over the land that this tragedy should have happened, that she who walked through life doing good, who was a light unto the blind, protection unto the weak, the mother of the poor, and in a sense, the mother of us all, should become the victim of our senseless strifes, our petty rivalries, our selfish ambitions," Father Ortiz said of Mrs. Quezon.

Among those who attended the service were Philippine Ambassador Joaquin M. Elizalde, United States Ambassador Myron M. Cowan, former Ambassador Emmet O'Neal and Mrs. O'Neal, Philippine Minister Emilio Abello, Col. C. J. Mara, White House aide representing President Truman; Representatives of Congress and Federal departments, and the entire embassy staff.

Miss Randolph Dies; Daughter Of General

Miss Anne Powel Randolph, socially prominent daughter of the late Gen. and Mrs. Wallace Fitz Randolph, died yesterday in her Mayflower Hotel apartment. She had been ill for two years.

Born at Fort Adams, Newport, R. I., Miss Randolph came to Washington about 1900. Her father fought in the Civil War and served for a time as the Army's Chief of Artillery. Her mother, the former Katherine Julia Powel, came from an old New York family.

Miss Randolph was social secretary to the late Andrew Mellon when he was Secretary of the Treasury during the twenties. She is survived by her sister, Miss Mary Randolph, who was Mrs. Coolidge's social secretary. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Scott Rites On Thursday At Arlington

Reburial services will be held at Arlington Cemetery on Thursday at 2:30 p. m. for Lieut. Col. Winfield Wayne Scott, a hero of the Bataan "death march," who died in 1942 in Cabanatuan prison camp in the Philippines.

Col. Scott

Colonel Scott died in the camp after surviving the death march, in which he was credited with saving the lives of three soldiers. He was wounded by a Japanese guard when aiding his companions, a service for which he was awarded the Bronze Star posthumously. He also was given the Legion of Merit.

Born in Waynesboro, Pa., Col. Scott was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1924, but was transferred to the Army at his own request. He was a graduate of the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill, Okla., and was in command of the Eighty-sixth Field Artillery Battalion at the time he was taken prisoner.

Colonel Scott is survived by his father, Winfield Scott of Enid, Okla.; his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Kimmell Scott, 2734 Ordway st. nw.; a son, Winfield W. Scott, jr., a cadet at West Point, and a daughter, Mrs. Charles McClay of the Ordway st. address.

Army to Bury Miss Rothwell, War I Nurse

Centreville, Md., May 3 (AP)—Miss Nellie Rothwell, one of the first members of the Army Nurse Corps, will be buried here Wednesday with military honors.

She died in the Veterans' Hospital at Perry Point, Md., Sunday, at 72.

Miss Rothwell served overseas with the Army in World War I, and for more than 30 years was a member of the Jane Delano American Legion Post in Washington, D. C.

The guard of honor detachment at Arlington Cemetery is sending a detail to participate in the rites at Chesterfield Cemetery after funeral services at Epworth Methodist Church. The Rev. R. J. Cooke will conduct the funeral, and Jeff Davis Post No. 18 of the American Legion will be in charge at the grave.

Miss Rothwell was born at Wakefield, Kans., but her family moved here when she was a child. Since retirement, she had lived on a farm just outside of town. She had been ill about two years, and was taken to the hospital April 21.

Survivors include four brothers: Alfred and Ernest, of Centreville, Edward, of Bridgeport, N. J., and Peter, of Miami, Fla.

Mary Haworth's Mail

What Is Wrong in Relationship if Two Young People Feel Compatible When Alone Together, But Seem Antagonistic in Larger Company?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is there something radically wrong in a relationship when two individuals are compatible when alone together, but seem to antagonize each other when with several other people?

Bill is a veteran, 21, attending college and making good grades. I, at 19, am studying college courses at night school and I believe my intelligence is comparable to his. We have been going together for more than a year, and both of us were reared in homes where economy is a watchword.

We attended the same high school, thus have mutual acquaintances. Our religion, nationality and social backgrounds are alike; and we have many like interests and traits. We don't make new friends readily and undoubtedly are the introvert type. Pastimes we enjoy together are movies, drives in the country, card games and long talks.

WE ARE thrifty, as I have said; but I seem to contradict my own nature when I resent the fact that Bill avoids spending for entertainment on our dates; and yet almost systematically takes advantage of my family's hospitality once a week, when plentiful refreshments are served. Is it fair of me to expect something in return? I have never considered myself an expensive date; and now I wonder, have I carried frugality to an extreme?

Due to our talks, and small favors he has done for me, I have come to feel that Bill cares for me, and I am strongly attracted to him; but still there are doubts in my mind as to the durability of our relationship. Bill's sharp manner of speaking and his egocentricity cause me the most indecision and worry. What, if anything, is lacking? Should we try to see more of other people, or can we find happiness primarily together? Please advise. B. C.

DEAR B. C.: The human being is a social animal, who needs to associate confidently and casually with a various stream of fellow beings, in order to keep his interests out-flowing.

If he gets rutted in solitary ways, he tends to become self centered and self concerned, fearful and critical of himself and others; and this debility in turn imposes a growing barrier between himself and humanity, so that he winds up neurotic or hypochondriac, unable or unfit for human fellowship eventually.

Your relationship with Bill appears to be a case of "like attracting like"; but with the disturbing flaw that neither one really likes himself, fundamentally. Each being an introvert—i. e., afraid of unfamiliar persons,—you have views and traits in common, so that you look at life from somewhat the same angle, and thus feel fairly at ease when alone together.

BUT in situations where you two are surrounded by extrovert companions, you feel socially inadequate, hence inferior, as compared to them. You feel that you are somehow "wrong." And in that instant you downgrade yourself and your "like" partner, Bill. He feels the same about himself and you, and that's why a cross-current of hostile "rejection" vibrates. As you say, you "antagonize each other" at such times.

It's certainly no remedy to sidestep normal fellowship and cleave more exclusively to each other. Rather, for health, each should endeavor, within himself, to build a bridge to other people; and should gain courage via psychological education that nurtures self esteem.

Also, each needs to develop tension-releasing social skills that (1) bring the whole being into play and (2) can be group-shared,—such, for instance, as dancing, tennis, swimming, musicianship, etc., instead of sticking in a rut of physically passive pursuits. At present, you're somewhat like a drowning pair clinging to each other for support; and I think each should learn to float on his own power. M. H.

Contemplating Those Lists Of Best and Worst Dressed, The Worst Seems to Be Best

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

A MASCULINE New York society columnist has a high time each year concocting a list of the country's ten worst-dressed women. From season to season the list has been studded with such world-famous names as Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Dorothy Lamour, Ivy Litvinoff (British wife of the former Soviet Foreign Minister and onetime Ambassador in Washington); Elsa Maxwell, and the Capital's own Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. Though the latest compilation isn't at hand, we've been informed that both Mrs. Longworth and and Miss Maxwell again have made the grade. Though this department takes firm stand against all gratuitously fabricated lists, our most pressing ambition is to be known as a "worst dressed" because it's today's ultimate mark of distinction.

Take, for instance, the gals rated as best dressed, are they ever heard from except as clothes horses? Did they ever write a book or even an article? Did they ever create beautiful escapism, enthrall millions of fans? Did the Duchess of Windsor ever DO anything except snag the Duke? Did Mrs. Byron Foy ever coin a witticism? Did Mrs. Harrison Williams, despite clothes—and millions—ever give as good a party as Elsa Maxwell or as dignified a dinner as Mrs. "Neely"? The answer is "NO"!

'Worst' Are Well-Dressed Still

BEST-DRESSED lists are made by dressmakers. Nine out of ten included are chosen because of lavish spending. Yet, oddly enough, all the so-called worst dressed, except Mme. Litvinoff, wear beautiful clothes. Mrs. Vanderbilt's dresses are superb, but she clings to a single white fox neckpiece, a "headache" band. Dottie Lamour's day dresses are exquisitely cut, neat as a pin. She never wears her sarong off lot! Miss Maxwell wears ensembles from Piguet, other French couturiers, yet she clings to her spheroid shape though her will power is such she could reduce. Mrs. Longworth wears exquisite Chinese brocade evening dresses but she clings to the same style of wide-brimmed hat, headache bands, toques, and figures wide-brimmed hats are trademarks of character, a sign the wearer has tried fashion, risen above its vagaries, adopted an item because it's satisfying, becoming. The day we can puzzle out some sartorial trademark, impress it, plus ourselves, on the public with sufficient insistence to make ANY worst-dressed list, we'll be as tickled as Washington Post editor Herbert Elliston must be with his Pulitzer Prize!

Advice To Aspiring Newshawks

SUMMER vacation is practically here and so many energetic young ladies, seeking to improve the shining hour, have written this department asking how to break into that glamorous (*) profession—journalism — we've — reluctantly decided to answer their queries with helpful, if brutal, honesty.

A correspondent from Kensington, Md., asks the following questions: 1. What salaries are paid for jobs in journalism? 2. What are the conditions and hours of the work? 3. What are the duties in the different fields. 4. What are the educational requirements? 5. What experience is needed in newspaper journalism? 6. What references are needed? 7. What are the prospects of advancement in this type of work? 8. At what age can I enter and at what age would I have to leave?

Taking a deep breath—1. If you're smart, industrious enough to achieve syndication, a six-figure income is possible. According to a national magazine, top-notcher Drew Pearson rakes in $300,000 annually, plus radio, of course. Mostly, though, salaries are discouragingly low. Copy boys and girls start at anywhere between twenty and thirty dollars per week—reporters from forty to fifty—these salaries depending on the newspapers concerned.

2. The conditions in most newspaper offices are pleasantly chaotic—overcrowded, noisy but exciting to the gregarious and non-neurotic. Working hours depend on the job. Reporters can, and do, put in a sixteen-hour day. If you write a column, the morning can be spent answering the telephone and attempting to write, afternoons on leg work for the next day's effort, evenings a combination of both. Days off are spent answering letters, scramming around, worrying. Covering King George VI and Queen Elizabeth's coronation, this correspondent had, by accurate count, nine hours sleep in five days.

3. Duties in any field are to do what the boss says—which may or may not prove agreeable.

4. Educational requirements for journalists are becoming higher and higher as the field narrows through newspaper amalgamations. A college degree is desirable, though not essential.

5. No experience is actually needed for those who start at what's called the "bottom"—i.e., copy boy or girl. It's handy to have been on a college or school newspaper, though. Some journalists, because of unusual backgrounds, started off on top of the pile with a personal column or its equivalent. This is pretty Alice-in-Wonderland, though.

6. Applicants for newspaper jobs should be equipped with letters of reference from several local leading citizens.

7. Advancement depends upon how much work, how much imagination is put into a newspaper job. A well-done job could work into an editorship, a column, a syndication, with sidelines in magazine, radio and television field. But no newspaper job should be attempted unless the person concerned is absolutely in love with newspapers or, better, a single, special newspaper.

8. Eighteen is usually the youngest age acceptable to editors. There's no quitting age in journalism. Dorothy Dix is well along in her eighties, Emily Price Post is in her seventies and recent Pulitzer Prize winner, Cartoonist Lute Pease is over eighty.

Final admonition. Few professions are more difficult to "break into," few more enthralling once you're "in." Journalism is perhaps the sole profession or trade in which a person of neither fortune nor importance, can get most places, see most, meet the interesting and mighty. However, a rugged constitution is a prime essential.

On the Party Front...

REPRESENTATIVE Cecil Harden from Indiana came right from the House of Representatives' Taft? Hartley debate yesterday afternoon for the cocktail and supper party given in her honor by former Senator and Mrs. Davis Elkins. The group of some forty guests was almost entirely Congressional—and Republican.

Senator and Mrs. Homer Capehart and Senator and Mrs. William E. Jenner of Indiana were there to greet Indiana's feminine member of Congress, as were Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster, Senator and Mrs. James P. Kem, Representative Joe Martin, former Senator and Mrs. Chapman Revercomb, back from West Virginia for a visit.

Then there were Judge and Mrs. Joseph R. Jackson, Representative and Mrs. Earl Wilson, Representative Carroll Kearns, and Mrs. Kearns, who's the new president of the League of Republican Women; former Representative Howard Coffin and Mrs. Thad Brown, a twosome these days; Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, William Hitt, former Senator and Mrs. Howard V. Robertson, Mrs. Fred Britten and Mr. and Mrs. Kingman Brewster.

A COCKTAIL party was given yesterday by the Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong for the Canadian delegates to the thirty-seventh annual meeting of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

In the gathering were the president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Henry G. Birks of Montreal, and Mrs. Birks, W. G. Borrie of Vancouver, B. C., Mr. and Mrs. C. Gordon Cockshutt of Brantford, Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Cruikshank of Ottawa, Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Elwyn of Hamilton, Ontario, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Morgan of Montreal, Quebec.

THE Finnish Counselor and Mme. von Numers entertained yesterday at one of a series of cocktail parties. They will be hosts again on Thursday from 6 to 8 o'clock.

SENATOR and Mrs. Ralph Flanders entertained at the second of a series of three dinners last evening at the Sulgrave Club. They will be hosts again on Thursday evening.

In the company last night were the British Ambassador and Lady Franks, Senator and Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall, the Bishop of Washington and Mrs. Angus Dun, Mr. and Mrs. Walter White, Mrs. Henry Leonard, Jouett Shouse, Miss Dorothy Stirling, John Montgomery and Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Balivet, jr., of Arlington, Va., son-in-law and daughter of the hosts.

COL. and Mrs. William F. Scheumann were guests of honor at a buffet supper at the Army Medical Center Officers Club given by members of the dental staff of Walter Reed Hospital last night. Col. Scheuman, who has been chief of the dental service at Walter Reed for the last five years will leave May 12 for similar duties at Murphy General Hospital, Waltham, Mass.

THE Ambassador of Haiti, Joseph D. Charles, was host at a luncheon yesterday honoring the Governor of Alaska, Ernest Gruening.

Fashions Suit Every Fancy

By Peggy Preston

IF FASHION SHOWS suit your fancy, then yesterday was your day. There were shows on the docket to suit the taste of everyone, from members of the toddler set up.

In first place and attracting the biggest throng were the two benefit performances of the "Maytime Fashion Review" at Lisner Auditorium in the afternoon and evening, featuring summer designs by Ben Reig. Tops in interest with the small fry was the showing of children's clothing on the "Meet Mrs. Markel" television program at 9:30 p. m. Young models, participating in the show, made a night of it and attended a supper later at the Raleigh Hotel.

Last but not least was the prevue showing of the spectacular, eye-jolting bathing suits at the luncheon given at the Hotel Cairo by sponsors of the Silver Spring Automobile Show which opens May 12.

Members of the Women's Board of George Washington University Hospital, headed by Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin and Mrs. Frank M. Russell, sponsored the Lisner Auditorium event. A modern dance group from the university opened the program, and following the fashion show, television and radio stars from the NBC network presented a variety review.

Sophisticated Collection

Omar Kiam, prize-winning designer for Ben Reig, offered a sophisticated summer collection of costumes, geared to town living. Black and brown were the dominant colors, with the pastels taking a back seat.

Jet black cotton poplins, cut for summer comfort with no sleeves and vanishing necklines, were included, and brown chambray, for dinner and dancing, was trimmed with black braid and jet beading.

Pure silk chiffons, with marvelous skirts done in the new "floating panel" idea were stars of the show. Occasionally the designer relented and presented a pastel blue or pink outfit, but on the whole his collection remained true to his conception of what a well-dressed woman looks like in town when the mercury is soaring skyward.

New Fabric

The startling "coldfire" fabric used in the costumes at the bathing suit show was being viewed in Washington for the first time. At first glance the suits looked like any other 1949 version. Designs and colors followed the usual trends. It was only when the models stepped into the sunlight that their suits "lighted up."

These suits, new in the East, are guaranteed to permit you to see a bathing beauty two miles away. Mothers should love them too for Junior—when he strays far down the beach, or falls into a muddy pool.

Your Child, 6 to 12

Encourage, Don't Drive, the Backward Child

(Fourth of a series based on the Children's Bureau new booklet "Your Child, from 6 to 12.)

By David Taylor Marke

All of us hope our children will be bright. But we aren't very good judges. However, in school we can compare their minds with others. Parents must come to learn that no amount of help or prodding will make a slow child a genius. Recognizing his real capacity, we can protect his happiness and self-respect by not nagging him. Taking his mental ability into consideration, we can plan education and vocational guidance.

Intelligence tests may describe ability to grasp problems, to invent ways of meeting them and help criticize ways of working out situations.

Parents cannot make children live up to their intelligence. But they can stimulate, keep aspirations high, and show appreciation. Here are some concrete ways to help:

1. Give practice that calls on ingenuity and initiative. Children are learning to think and reason. School work calls increasingly on these abilities. Children love to discuss causes and reasons. Ingenious parents will find ways of setting children to searching out answers.

2. Stimulate children by providing freedom to explore, materials to experiment with and learn from.

Reading aloud is tops in stimulating mental growth. Have a good children's encyclopedia. Even before they can read, children absorb much knowledge through pictures.

3. Parents can share good books with children, also creating activities and satisfying skills.

Excursions to a bakery or dairy, a quarry or sand pit, or a visit to docks or railroad yards make children's imaginations soar.

4. Parents should discriminate between encouraging their children's belief in their own powers, and stimulating an arrogant, aggressive spirit. Our goal should be to enjoy a job well done, pleasure from contribution, not from beating the other fellow.

5. Above all, we can help best use of mental powers by accepting them as they are and expecting only what is possible. It is not the amount of brains, but harmonious mind and emotions that help fit a child into the social scheme.

(Tomorrow: developing wholesome sex attitudes.)

How to Remove Floor-Wax Stains

I waxed my furniture and unfortunately spilled some on the upholstery. I tried to clean it with ammonia and cleaning fluid, but the spot is still there. What can I do? J. G. J.

It is very difficult to remove stains from upholstery because there is no way to place padding under the stain to catch the soil when it is driven out of the upholstery fabric. Also, the wax has probably soaked the padding immediately under the stain. Because of this, if this is a valued piece, I suggest you turn the job of removing the stain over to a professional furniture cleaner. If, on the other hand, you wish to take a chance on removing it yourself, try this: moisten cornstarch with carbon tetrachloride and rub it into the stained area. Let stand 20 to 30 minutes to absorb as much wax as possible and remove with the brush attachment of your vacuum sweeper or a brush. It may take several treatments to see improvement with this method, but it should not harm the upholstery. If this doesn't remove the stain, another suggestion is to shampoo the entire piece, giving special attention to the stained area by using a good commercial upholstery shampoo applied with a soft brush. Follow the directions which come with the product you buy. When the piece is shampooed, turn a fan on it or set it in open air for quick drying.

During a recent move, my plate glass mirror became scratched. Is there anything I can do to make this less conspicuous? V. L. R.

If the scratch is not deep and on the front of the mirror, you may be able to improve the appearance by rubbing it with jeweler's rouge. If this doesn't remove it, nothing further can be done. If the scratch is at the back of the mirror and the silvering has been removed, the entire back must be resilvered to remove it. For a firm to do this look under "mirrors" in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

Quite some time ago you published a recipe for Tipsy Cake which I have heard a great deal about, but have not so far been able to get a copy. Will you publish it? F. A. S.

TIPSY CAKE

Take a three day old sponge cake and break it into pieces. Place the pieces in a mold or deep casserole and sprinkle with enough sweet wine or sherry mixed with 6 tablespoons of brandy to soak it. When the cake is well soaked, blanch and cut the almonds into strips and sprinkle over the cake in the mold. Pour over this a pint of soft custard. Chill and serve topped with whipped cream.

SOFT CUSTARD

4 eggs slightly beaten
1/8 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
2 cups milk, scalded
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Combine eggs, salt and sugar; gradually stir in hot milk and cook in top of double boiler over boiling water five minutes or until mixture coats the spoon stirring constantly. Add vanilla and cool quickly.

Could butter be put in a freezer and frozen? If so, should salt be put in it before it is stored? How long could it be kept in there? S. R.

Yes, butter can be kept by freezing. It makes no difference whether salt is added before or after the butter is frozen, but the flavor may be better if it is added before freezing. If kept constantly below freezing temperature, butter can be kept successfully up to a year. The keeping quality of the butter, of course, depends upon the quality of the butter when it goes into storage. If the butter isn't of the very best grade, it is necessary to store it at lower temperatures than if it were of high quality.

Inquiries and contributions to the "Ask Anne" column must be in written form. We regret that time does not permit handling them by telephone. Address letters or cards to Anne, Room 403, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

Womens' Clubs Here Observe Boy, Girl Week

It was a "Come-See-Hear" luncheon at Friendship House yesterday when officers of the District Federation of Women's Clubs met in celebration of "Boys and Girls Week."

The luncheon was the high spot in a series of guided tours this week of the Washington Settlements arranged by the Youth Conservation Committee of the District Federation.

Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger, president-director of the federation, stressed the importance of settlements in building for future citizenship.

"They are not only recreational but re-creational centers," she asserted, "where young people can discover abilities, develop talents, and have wholesome experiences that will help them develop into well-poised, self-reliant and happy adults."

"If sufficient and suitable leisure-time programs under trained leaders were made available in a community," she continued, "young people are less apt to get into trouble and indulge in wreck-reational activities."

Miss Lydia A. H. Burklin, director of Friendship House, stressed the continuous study of "conditions and needs of the neighborhood and making these needs known to the local residents and the city at large" as one of the outstanding functions of settlement work.

Miss Elaine Exton, D. C. Federation Youth Conservation Chairman, said "Boys and Girls Week affords a splendid opportunity to focus community attention on the achievements of youth and the constructive contributions of local youth-serving agencies."

Today's guided tour will be at Barney Neighborhood House, 470 N st. nw., between 3 and 10 p. m.

Atlantic, Rio Pacts Similar, Canyes Tells AAUW Group

The North Atlantic Pact and the Rio Treaty of 1947 both have the same aim and purpose—to discourage aggression, Manuel Canyes said yesterday.

Mr. Canyes, chief of the Division of Legal Affairs, Pan American Union, was the guest speaker at the Washington branch, American Association of University Women fellowship dinner yesterday.

"The North Atlantic Pact and the Rio Treaty," he said, "serves to buttress the weakness which experience has revealed in the United Nations organization. They supplement the machinery for the maintainance of peace and security so that the parties may be in a better position to do what they have already pledged themselves to do as members of the UN."

Luncheon Honors Essay Winners

Winners in the essay contest for high schools, sponsored jointly by the Woman's Advertising Club of Washington and the Advertising Club of Washington, were honored at a luncheon yesterday at the Statler Hotel.

Washington winners are: Mary Stout of Woodrow Wilson High School, who will be awarded $100; Beatrice Campbell Shaw, Montgomery Blair High School, $50; Laurel Brown, Woodrow Wilson High School, $25; William G. Hertzel, jr., Calvin Coolidge High School, $15; and Patricia Ann Perry, Woodrow Wilson High School, $10. Honorable mention was given to Sarita Smith, Dunbar High School; Ann Simmons, Dunbar High School; and Phyllis Margaret Pledger, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

Senator Smith Wants Atlantic Pact Terms Clarified

By Genevieve Reynolds

SENATOR MARGARET CHASE SMITH (R., Me.) yesterday called for a clarification of lanuage in the North Atlantic Pact.

"I want the State Department to tell Congress (the Senate) exactly what articles 4 and 5 of the Pact means," she told some 600 wives of the United States Commerce members and officials at the Commerce Wives annual luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel where Mrs. Truman appeared as guest of honor.

"I don't want to buy a pig in a poke without the American people knowing what they are getting into," she explained.

The Maine Senator said that she wants the language in the pact spelled out in language that all can understand. For example, she said that Congress and the people should know whether this country is committed to fight in case of an attack against another signatory of the pact.

If so, does it provide for assistance for internal attacks by fifth columnists as well as aid when attacked by armed forces from the outside.

Declaring that she considers her vote on the Atlantic Pact to be one of the most important of her life, Senator Smith added:

"I hope it will be for realistic peace, not war."

EMPHASIZING that the Atlantic Pact is designated for peace, the Congresswoman listed it, however, as the short-term approach to peace.

According to Senator Smith, the other two approaches to peace are: (1) the United Nations Organization—the immediate one which is the living symbol of cooperation; (2) world government—the long-term objective.

"World government can or should come only through evolution," she explained. "It can come only when nations are willing to sacrifice some of their individual national sovereignty for world order and peace."

"Number one problem of the American people is fear of insecurity," Senator Smith declared. "It shapes our daily psychology and living, and dims our vision of the future.

"Military insecurity breeds economic insecurity," she continued. "But economic insecurity is preferable to military insecurity. We can't bluff the Russians. We have to have what it takes to back up our foreign policy."

To avoid war, she said we should make aggression as unattractive as possible and make cooperation for peace as attractive as possible.

MISS Frieda B. Hennock, only woman member of the Federal Communications Commission, deplored the guessing games of businessmen and economists as to "whether we are entering a depression or just coming out of a depression."

She told the Commerce wives who have gathered here from every State in the Union, as well as from Canada: "In my opinion crystal gazing does not pay. The chief practical result of wondering whether or not we are running into a depression is to cause people to hesitate, businessmen to cancel orders, housewives to reconsider necessary purchases. It creates the very psychology upon which depressions are nourished."

Commissioner Hennock cited the prevention of inflation and depressions as the two major problems of our domestic economy.

Mrs. Earl O. Shreve of New York, wife of the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, presided at the women's luncheon, held simultaneously with the annual USC of C convention, now in session here.

In her welcoming address, Mrs. Shreve pointed out that the USC of C came into being at the request of the Government. She said that President Taft requested the federation of businessmen which now numbers 1,250,000 members.

Lady Franks, wife of the British Ambassador, shared top honors with Mrs. Truman at the luncheon. Later in the afternoon, Lady Franks entertained the wives of Chamber delegates and officials at a tea at the British Embassy.

Guests at the head table in addition to Mrs. Truman, Lady Franks, the speakers and Mrs. Shreve, were the wives of past presidents of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, including Mrs. Eric Johnston, Mrs. William K. Jackson, Mrs. Roy C. Ingersoll, Mrs. Albert W. Hawkes, Mrs. Roy C. Ingersoll, Mrs. Herman W. Steinkraus, Mrs. W. S. Rosecrans, Mrs. Powell C. Groner, Mrs. Carlyle Fraser, Mrs. Christopher J. Abbott, Mrs. Ellsworth C. Alvord.

Mrs. Henry G. Birks, wife of the president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Ralph Bradford, wife of the vice president of the USCC; and Mrs. Gordon Cookhutt, wife of the chairman of the Canadian-United States Commerce Committee, were others at the head table.

Mrs. Truman Sees Installation

Incoming Women's Party Head Sees Equal Rights Law Soon

DR. AGNES E. WELLS of Saginaw, Mich. yesterday was installed as national chairman of the National Woman's Party at an impressive ceremony, with Mrs. Truman as ranking guest. The induction ceremony highlighted a reception for the new officers in the gardens of historic Alva Belmont House, 144 B. st. ne.—NWP headquarters.

Immediately upon taking the oath of office, Dr. Wells, a former dean of women at the University of Indiana, pledged a Nation-wide educational campaign on the "Equal Rights Amendment."

"Having been in the education field for 43 years, I am aware that our schools do not teach children the meaning of the freedom which they enjoy under the Constitution of the United States," said Dr. Wells, "nor are they informed of the many discriminations against women which exist in the statutes of the States."

The educator said her policy is that of the National Woman's Party: To gain equal rights under the law for women.

"We know the Equal Rights Amendment will pass the Eighty-first Congress," declared Dr. Wells.

Miss Anita Pollitzer, retiring chairman of the NWP, outlined the achievements of her administration. She announced that last week two States Legislatures—North Dakota and Minnesota—memorialized Congress to pass the Equal Rights Amendment.

The retiring chairman, who hails from Charleston, S. C., pointed out that when the Equal Rights Amendment was introduced by the NWP it had no support of other organizations and that now it is backed by over 30 national groups.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) and Representative Katharine St. George (R., N. Y.) reaffirmed their support of the Equal Rights Amendment when they arrived at the end of the reception. Both were detained by Hearings and votes in Congress and were unable to attend the ceremony. Representative St. George is the chief sponsor of the Amendment in the House.

Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller of Pennsylvania and Washington, who has served as the party's national legislation chairman, was installed first vice chairman of the NWP.

Four other vice chairmen of the party were installed. They include Mrs. Helen Hunt West of Jacksonville, Fla.; Dr. Florence Armstrong of Alxeandria, Va.; Mrs. Betty Gram Swing of Westport, Conn., and Mrs. Horace H. Sayre of Ardmore, Okla.

PIN-WORMS
CAN CAUSE
SERIOUS TROUBLE

Beware of Pin-Worms . . . ugly creatures that live and grow inside the human body. Medical experts say that as many as one out of three persons may be infected. And not even the most careful families can be sure of escaping these nasty pests.

One of the danger signs of Pin-Worms is the tormenting, embarrassing rectal itch. And this can be the warning of more serious troubles . . . even internal inflammation and bleeding.

Don't take chances! At the first sign of Pin-Worms, get Jayne's P-W Vermifuge from your druggist. P-W contains an effective, medically-approved ingredient that destroys Pin-Worms and removes them from the body.

The small, easy-to-take P-W tablets were perfected in the laboratories of the famous Jayne Co., specialists in worm remedies for over 100 years. Get P-W—destroy those Pin-Worms . . . relieve that itch.

Just Remember: P-W ◎ for Pin-Worms!

Apparently it has occurred to Sam Forst, owner of Fan & Bill's, that the gentle art of conversation flourishes best with his customers at their meals. This is doubtless good.

There is that sometimes glum interval, however, between the taking of an order and the serving of the food wherein conversation may languish. To Forst Forst, this is not so good. He has come up with a solution—reading.

"Fan & Bill's Gazette," a one-page weekly publication carrying the restaurateur's byline under a column slugged "Between Us Gourmets," now occupies a place of importance at each table. Vol. 1, No. 1 made its appearance last week.

At the outset of his literary stint, Forst observes that the column is designed to fill that brief time between the moment you sit down at your table and the moment you begin enjoying your food.

Having thus declared himself, the author goes on to describe why another author, Mark Twain, learned to dislike catfish stew and buttermilk. Seems that's all Twain had to eat during his early years. Got so he couldn't stand the stuff. Maybe one reason he left home.

After Twain hit the jackpot, however, he ate only the finest foods, here and abroad. Then, world-weary, somewhat sated, relates Forst, he returned to his boyhood home. They fed him, naturally, catfish stew and buttermilk. And life once again had meaning.

Having told this tale neatly, Forst wraps it up by hoping you will find something memorable about your meal at his place, announces that the waiter probably is at hand with your cocktail, and retires gracefully until next week's edition.

Comes a note from Eric Thorson, the husky, blond singer whose four-week engagement at the Mayflower Lounge in February was a smash hit. Thorson has just gone into the Cotillion Room of New York's Hotel Pierre after playing the Biltmore in Providence.

Says he misses working at the Mayflower, hopes he'll be up for a return engagement some day. Says the review this department gave him was a "corker," which it was, at that. Come back, Eric—we won't compare you with a walrus next time, no matter how talented the walrus.

NIGHTERY NOTES . . . Sonny Kippe, his accordion, and his orchestra, have opened in the Metronome Room of the Wardman Park. Sonny, one of the top accordion leaders in the biz, features music in the society manner . . . Into the Salle de Champagne—an artist who'll do your portrait as you relax in some of that so-soft upholstery. If you're a sketcher yourself, bring your pad along. There's an "artist's corner" for you where you can draw to your heart's content. Use a waitress as a model, if you like.—Robert P. Jordan

Leopold Declares He Wants Belgian Throne Back

Brussels, Belgium, May 3 (AP).—Exiled King Leopold III made it clear today he wants to return to the throne of Belgium.

In a letter to his brother, Prince Charles, Belgian regent, the King said: "I am convinced you are sharing my views that the time has come for a return to constitutional normalcy."

The insistence of the King that the present situation be ended indicates he wants to wind up the regency. This could be done only by Parliament, where a small majority still is opposed to Leopold's return. However, national elections to be held by the end of June may change the balance in favor of the King.

Woman Prevaricates Under 'Truth' Serum

Manchester, England, May 3 —(UP)—Hospital authorities here announced today pentothal, a "truth serum," had belied its name.

They said the drug was administered to a middle-aged spinster, suffering from amnesia. Asker her name, she replied, "Mary Burton." Police searched for three months for "Mary Burton's" relatives before a sister came forward and identified the victim as Margaret Flanagan.

National Weather Summary

Washington Area—Sunny, rather hot with high about 87. Thursday—Some cloudiness, humid and continued warm.

Here's Spiritual Advice For Our Motorists

Maj. Charles S. Coulter of 4212 37th st. nw. says it's amazing how few Washington motorists pay attention to the sirens of emergency vehicles.

When you hear a fire engine or ambulance, you're supposed to get over to the side of the road, and stop.

Purpose of that rule is twofold: To clear a path for the emergency car, and to keep you from being hit.

But for some reason local motorists ignore the sirens, and go blithely on their way.

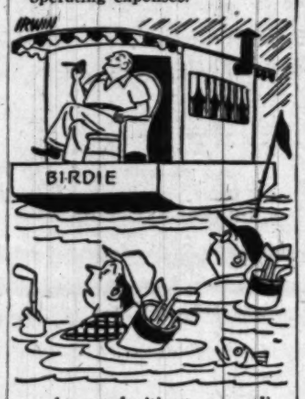
It's a good way to become a blithe spirit, if you know what I mean.

SO HE NEEDS HIGHER GREENS FEES, EH?

The congressional investigation of S. G. Leoffler's operation of our local public golf courses is making it increasingly clear why so little money was available for maintenance and so much remained for profits.

Among other things, Congressman Poulson charged that there is a $20,000 "discrepancy" in Leoffler's accounts, and that his bookkeeping is "completely inadequate."

In addition, James E. Schwab of the District Recreation Board said that Leoffler bought a $3700 Cadillac and charged its cost to "operating expenses."



A more legitimate expenditure would have been the purchase of a houseboat, on which Mr. Leoffler might have cruised the various lakes which form on his courses after a day's rain.

However, there's no point in picking on Leoffler, or first thing you know the Board of Trade will vote him a resounding endorsement.

AINT IT AWFUL?

A Boston judge has refused to ban two new books. What some people won't do to get their names in the paper!

MISCELLANY

Somehow I can't seem to get very excited about the Ingrid Bergman "international love triangle," but I'll keep trying . . . Mrs. Joseph B. Dratch of 8027 Eastern ave., Silver Spring, Md., tells me that she's one of 22 mothers banded together in a nonprofit cooperative nursery school that's looking for an old piano for the kids. If you know of one, her number is Sligo 3929, and the mothers will arrange for hauling it . . . Stanley Lipnick of 3612 Van Ness st. nw. lays aside his English homework long enough to drop me a note sympathizing with my plight in trying to get the hang of photographic "flash numbers" . . . Mrs. Elinor K. Weingarten of 4035 Clay pl. ne. commends "the driver of Bus No. 5152" for his courtesy in helping a blind man. Capital Transit records plus some detective work pin the laurels on William D. Caton (Operator 1142) of 3704 43d ave., Cottage City, Md., who holds a 7-year safety award and is a member of the "Glad-to-Have-You-Aboard" club . . . We've had a lot of praise for carrier boys, but here's one for a full-fledged man. Mrs. M. Moore of RFD 3, Vienna, Va., says that Dan Brown, who serves her area, is tops . . . Mrs. Margaret Southard of 4500 13th st. nw. clips an item from a recent edition of this newspaper which says: "The Magdalena, winding up her maiden voyage, ran around outside the bay." Quips Mrs. Southard: "Quite a lively maiden."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Have you ever tried to cross Pennsylvania ave. at 15th st., from the Washington Hotel corner to the tempo building on the other side?

The only way you can do it is to go halfway across on the red light.

Herb Harris
1121 N. Kensington St.
Arlington, Va.

Dear Herb:

Traffic Director Keneipp's office says: "Yep, we know this is a bad corner for pedestrians, and we're working on it. We'll probably have to use 'walk' signals there, and we may have to change the timing of the lights—but that gets mighty complicated."

Bill.

PERSONAL NOTES

LOOKS THAT WAY

Leonidas (Santa Claus) Beall of 6420 Western ave., Chevy Chase, Md., was musing about that recent wedding day fracas which culminated in the arrival of police.

"It would appear," observed District Liner Beall, "that the best man at that wedding was the cop."

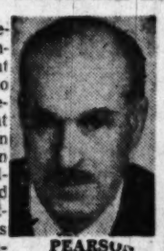
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Recent Slants on Cold War

By Drew Pearson

Here are uncensored diplomatic slants on how the cold war and the hot peace negotiations are going. Some are bad but most are good.



PEARSON

Russians Relent—The Iranian government has reported to the State Department that all Russian pressure on Iran has suddenly and strangely halted. Two weeks ago the Iranians had prepared a formal demand that the United Nations Security Council investigate Soviet aggression. But the pressure eased up dramatically when negotiations over Berlin began.

Evatt's Optimism—Dr. Herbert Evatt, president of the United Nations General Assembly, is happier than he's ever been about the future of the U. N. The fact that the Berlin peace talks have taken place in the U. N. has thoroughly justified its existence even if the organization accomplishes nothing else. Actually the U. N. has already brought peace to Palestine, Pakistan and India. Not bad for a three-year-old baby.

Austrian Jitters—The Austrian government is alarmed because the Hungarian army has begun building concrete pillboxes along the Austrian border. Huge floodlights and barbed-wire barricades also are being installed opposite Austria with pillboxes every 100 yards.

Arms to Europe—The Joint Chiefs of Staff have notified President Truman that the Army has 9286 surplus tanks and 7 million tons of ammunition it can ship to Western Europe under the Atlantic pact. That's enough to equip 25 armored divisions.

American Plant in Yugoslavia—Yugoslavia has begun secret negotiations with an American company to build a steel plant in Yugoslavia. The State Department has given its blessings to the deal upon recommendations from the American Embassy, which is looking for ways to keep Marshal Tito from patching up his fight with Moscow. American engineers are now estimating the costs, which may go as high as 100 million dollars.

The Vaughan Medal

Senator Ray Baldwin of Connecticut made sensational news last week by resigning from the Senate to become a State Supreme Court judge in his home State. And behind-the-scenes he may make more news by blocking the diamond-studded medal recently given to President Truman's military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, by President Peron of Argentina.

The Vaughan medal hasn't actually come before the Senate yet, but Senator Baldwin gave some idea as to how his mind was working by holding up approval of various foreign decorations for American citizens until the Senate could study the entire question. Meanwhile, he called attention to Article 1, Section 9, Paragraph 8 of the United States Constitution, which is clear and to the point. It states: "No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States. And no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept any present, emolument, office, or title of any kind whatever from any king, prince, or foreign state."

Under this provision, some members of the Senate Armed Services Committee questioned whether General Vaughan was within his legal rights in accepting the Peron medal. The State department argued that he was, claiming that technically he had not accepted, had merely turned the medal over to the State Department for safekeeping until Congress approved.

However, from the propaganda viewpoint, which was the main thing Peron was interested in, some Senators felt Vaughan had definitely accepted the medal. His photo was taken with the Argentine Ambassador pinning the medal on his bosom.

Radio transcriptions were made of Vaughan's acceptance speech, and the Argentine Embassy said it planned to distribute the recordings through Latin America. Certainly in the eyes of South Americans, who do not understand United States legal technicalities, Vaughan accepted the medal and the incident had the effect of giving White House blessing to the government of South America's leading dictator.

Medals Held Up

Meanwhile the State Department is holding more than 100 foreign decorations for United States citizens, and recently sent 12 of the least controversial decorations to the Senate Armed Services Committee for its okay. No Senator has any objection to these 12, since they are British awards to United States scientists. However, their approval might set a precedent for okaying Vaughan's medal, and at a closed-door meeting, alert Senator Baldwin objected to considering the awards in dribbles and batches. He urged instead that the whole question of foreign decorations be settled first.

As a result, the awards were held up and letters were written sounding out various governmental departments on the question of foreign medals.
